She reports her relatives having made it pleasant for her. She expects to be home about the first of next month.

Our little boy was afflicted with rheumatism in his knee, and at times unable to put his foot to the floor. We tried in vain, everything that we could hear of that we thought would help him. We almost gave up in despair, when some one advised us to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. We did so, and the first bottle gave so much relief that we got a second one, and to our surprise it cured him sound and well.—J. T. Bays, Pastor Christian Church, Neodesha, Kan. For sale by J. Y. Breckenridge, Druggist, Pine City.

Prof. Hall, geologist of the State University, was here on Friday, and was accompanied by W. A. Mason and Ed Madden on a trip to Kettle River, in the southeastern part of the county, to examine the rock for the purpose of finding whether it contained mineral in paying quantities or not. They returned on Monday evening, but as yet we have not been enabled to find what he discovered. The part of the country where they were engaged in the same where the old Kettle river copper mines are situated, extracts of the constitution of which we published some time ago.

Paymaster J. H. Sutherland and assistants of White Earth reservation arrived in the village last Friday and were driven by A. J. Conger to Lawrence where Indian annuities were distributed the following day. The per capita amount paid was $7 aggregating between $4000 and $5000. The small percent of their money being spent for the necessities of life. A number of temporary stores were at the lake during the payment, two Mora merchants being on the grounds with stocks of goods. They did a fairly good business. Since the payment Mora has had a score or more of drunken Indians on the streets. The red man seems to have a natural appetite for firewater, and will have it when he has money.—Mora Times.

Another Old Resident Gone.

Died—In this village, on Tuesday evening October 4th, 1898, at about 9 o'clock of consumption, William H. Smith.

Mr. Smith was born in Ramsey county, this state, October 31st, 1856. He came to this place at nine years of age and has made it his home ever since. He was married the 11th day of June, 1887, to Miss Mattie Murphy, and four children have been born to them, three of which survive him, two girls and a boy.

Mr. Smith was a hard working, honest, honorable man, an indulgent husband and father and a good citizen. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. of this place, and the members of the order have done all in their power for their brother and his family.

Mr. Smith leaves a loving wife, three small children, three sisters, who reside at Oceola Mills, Wisconsin, and a large number of friends to mourn his loss.

The funeral has held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the M. E. church, Rev. H. Taylor officiating, with interment in Birchwood cemetery, with the A. O. U. W. burial ceremony.

The Post joins with the many friends of the family in extending its sympathy.

How to Prevent Croup.

We have two children who are subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this country and no matter what we do, without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it is sold here than of all other cough medicines combined. J. M. Nickels, St. Xavier's Bros. Merchants, Nickleville, Pa. For sale by J. Y. Breckenridge, Druggist, Pine City.

NOTICE WANTED.

Notice is hereby given, that School District No. 30 will receive bids for the erection of a school house in said District. Plans can be seen at the Clerk's office. Bids must be presented by the 12th day of October. The trustees reserve the right to reject any and all bids or parts of bids.

C. F. STEPHAN, District Clerk.

MEADOW LAWS.

J. F. Heller went to Hinckley on Saturday, on business.

O. Scofield's school, who has been sick for the past week, is on the gain.

Mrs. Kilgore fell down collar recently. She says the stop at the bottom is all that hurt her.

Mrs. Geo. Turner and Mr. Turner's mother sailed with Mrs. M. K. Smith. They have returned to Pierce County, Wis.

A basket supper was served last week for the benefit of the Sunday school, and after the party had eaten the dieties, Miss Hamlin and Mrs. Kilgore entertained the guests at the organ. All report a good time.

HINCKLEY.

Mr. Gibson is erecting a nice house.

Henry Kruse is making improvements on his residence.

Chas. Granville and son will soon begin sinking a well in Rock Creek.

Chas. Granville is erecting a new residence, 21228, opposite the school house.

Henry Kruse is rushing out his potato crop, employing six diggers. His crop will average 200 bushels per acre.

The Toledo Weekly Blade.

Every intelligent family needs addition to their local paper, a national weekly. The greatest and most widely known family newspaper is the Toledo Weekly Blade. For thirty years it has been a regular visitor in every part of the Empire and is well known in almost every one of the 70,000 post-offices in this country. It is edited with reference to national circulation. It is a republican paper, but people of all parties take it, because of its honor and fairness in the discussion of public questions. It is the favorite family paper, with something in every member of the household. It contains history, poetry, wit and humor, the household department, (best in the world), Young Folks, Sunday School Lessons, Tailor's System, the Farmer's, the Question Box (which answers questions for subscribers), the news of the week complete form, and other special features. Specimen copies gladly sent on application, and if you will send us a list of addresses, we will mail a copy to each. Only $1 a year. If you wish to raise a club, write for terms.

Address: Toledo, Ohio.

THE STORY TELLER

POMIUK'S RING.

By Ralph Graham Vester.

IT is only a slight gold band with a tiny opal setting, a child's ring for you or I could not push it below the joint of the little finger. For the matter of that, neither can its small owner now, but that makes no difference to Pomuk; it is the dearest thing on earth to him.

Some of you who heard "the world's fair at Chicago and strayed into the Bekino village, at the northwest corner of Jackson park, may recollect a little fellow who always wore a ring of gold face, and whose small, turned-up nose was sometimes in need of a handkerchief. You may remember his comical dances, that brought him in showers of nickels from the spectators; though he did not dance for very long, for he had a fall in the ground one day that made him a cripple. But this was not Pomuk's only means of conjuring the small change out of the visitors' pockets. None there could better crack one of the long whips, and with it send small coins spinning, and he was quite an expert, throwing a harpoon; but his greatest source of income was not through skill or chance at all. It was the irresistible way he had of winning all hearts about him, and by this he held the combinations to a good many well-filled purses. Do not, however, let Pomuk's love for nickels, dimes and cents turn over him in your estimation. He knew very little about their real value; in fact, he knew very little about that until long after the world's fair opened; but they were bright and pretty things, and Pomuk loved to play with them and to hear their merry jingling; for Pomuk, despite of his general ways and ever smiling countenance, was a veritable vaudevillian, and a close study of him might easily lead one to entertain a lesser regard for the enlightenment of civilization.

But I started to tell you about his ring, and I must not wander from the subject.

His first day upon a civilized shore was marked by an event for Pomuk that made it ever memorable. It was the 10th day of October, the year before the big show was held, that Pomuk landed at Boston with 56 other Eskimos; and it happened that among those who came down to the wharf to see the curious cargo brought by the schooner Evalina there was a theatrical manager. Whether it was the kindness of his heart or to advertise his performance, what his motive, the fact remains that he gave these strange visitors to America the freedom of his play-house; and that evening nearly a score of them, under a proper escort, attended in a body and occupied the boxes.

The play was merely a big burlesque, and they could not understand a word of it. They were dazzled by the lights and the crowd, and they were told to cheer and the ballet. The stage, with its hidden workings, was a marvel past understanding; but the songs were heard, and the dancing—ah, the dancing!

Pomuk had thought that he could dance; but never in all his most fanciful dreams had he pictured such wonderful dancing. From the first to the last his gaze fastened upon the dainty leader of the ballet. She was a mere child, but nevertheless the most skillful dancer that ever graced an American theater, and all Boston was talking of her and loudly voicing her praise. When her dance was over, and she left the stage, Pomuk's smile departed, and he sank back again into the seat from which her fascinations had drawn him.

The interpreter asked him if he liked it, and Pomuk's little black eyes lighted up and his little tongue rolled off long Eskimo words at the rate of 200 a minute. The manager was standing by his chair, and he noted the child's animation.

"What does he say?" he asked.

"He says," replied the interpreter, "that since he has come aboard the ship, people have been telling him about God and Heaven and angels, and that if he were good he would go there when he died; but he says they must have made a mistake for he doesn't believe there is a God, yet he certainly is in Heaven."

"There are very few angels here, I fear," remarked the manager, sadly. Not that the manager needed an "angel," for he was playing to crowded houses.

Pomuk now wanted to know what the manager had been saying, and when he learned of the manager's remark, he replied with promptness: "There is surely one angel—that little one. Oh, boy, I would like to speak to her."

No sooner was Pomuk's wish made known than the manager called an attendant, and in a very few minutes the little girl and her mother entered the box. The little girl had, of course, changed her attire, and Pomuk hardly recognized her at first, but when she said so his joy knew no bounds. He promptly threw his arms round her neck, and not only rubbed noses, Eskimo fashion, but gave her cheeks a rousing smack, which she might have even heard all over the house had not the orchestra been playing.

The little girl took it good-naturedly, and then began for both of them a half hour or so of such novel pleasure and amusement as neither had ever enjoyed before. In a very few minutes they managed to dispense with the services of the interpreter; and presently they retired to the back of the box, where the little girl danced a few measures for him, and then put upon him to dance for her. It took her but a moment to master his odd steps, and when she joined in the dance she was as good as Pomuk's heart, if he hadn't it all before that.

At last the mother said they must go. As long as the little girl's best time, and their parting brings me to my story.

The little girl put a ring from her finger and fitted it to one of Pomuk's. "Keep that," she said, "so I will know you when I see you again, perhaps it will find its way to you."

Pomuk looked at the little token, and his eyes suddenly filled with tears. Alas! he had nothing to give in return.

"Never mind," said the little girl, putting her arm round him; "I shall never forget you. I shall not wear a reminder."

All through the hot, weary months at Chicago Pomuk treasured the little girl's ring, and he thought of the donor, and wondered when he would meet her again, and longed for her with as much longing as only the heart of a child could hold.

When the great fair was over, and Pomuk with his people—Kangatsuk, the young man, and his mother, his wife, and Kamaliut and Skeepa, his cousins—returned to their home in the frozen north, which, from the needs of their nomadic life, is from Kachook to Ungava, Pomuk gave his uncle his board of quarters, nickels and dimes. These, with his uncle's savings, were promptly converted into fishing nets, guns, ammunition, clothing, a cook stove and cooking utensils, tobacco, and molasses, and last, but not least, in their estimation, the clock and a maltese kitten. But with one thing Pomuk would not part for aught this side of the grave, and that was his ring.

Kangatsuk fell among thieves by the way, and Pomuk, for many vicissitudes, they managed to reach their northern home, there were but few of their purchases left, save the stove, the clock and the kitten, and the rest of the ring had already outgrown, with its tiny opal setting.

KNOWLEDGE ENOUGH.

Although She Was from Boston She Cared Not for a Higher Subject Than Bees.

Notwithstanding her nose turned up, there were eyes on her, and she was from Boston, which may be considered to be constant testimony that, besides, just everything she was visiting in Brooklyn before the hot spell and the "big" young man, the man who prides himself on his intellectual attainments, was said, with a scornful sneer, as it happened, the young man had an opportunity shortly after the meeting to talk with the young woman alone, and he did not fail to throw a few brains at her.

"Ah, Miss Sophie," he said, "with a scornful sneer in his gentle voice, 'I presume you had at least several of the numerous models of poultry in which Boston is so rich and Brooklyn is so poor.'"

"I am sorry," she hesitated, "but really, Mr. Blank, I do not attend any."

"Indeed, and do you have no interest in any of the concepts of modern philosophic thought?"

"None whatever, I fear," and she really seemed to be sorry to have been so earnest of her golden, glorious opportunities.

"But, Miss Sophie, the young man had an opportunity in the subject of modern philosophic thought, and he did not fail to throw a few brains at her."

"So far I have not observed that it did, she said, apologetically."

"How can it be possible?" he exclaimed. "The sphere of your knowledge must be far wider than it is with us."

"No, Miss Sophie, measuring her words carefully, 'I should say it was not. Do you know as long as we Bostonians know beans when the bag's open we don't worry overmuch about the question, 'Why should we? Isn't that enough for us to know?'"

FAVEROLLE FOWLS.

They Are Already Quite Popular in France, Where They Originated Long Ago.

The Faverolle fowl is remarkable for quickness of growth, easy fattening and quality and amount of flesh. It is already a result of a demand in French markets for a larger fowl than the Houdan. The breed was developed in the district about the town of Faverolle, a small place about a dozen miles to the south of Houdan, and no doubt the Faverolle fowl is a result of various crosses with the Houdan breed. To obtain a true explanation of this variety it is necessary to go back about 40 years. The district about Faverolle, at that time, possessed a race of mongrel poultry, together with the pure Houdan. This was the time when Cochins, Light Brahmans and Dorkings first became popular in France. Poultry keepers introduced males of these breeds to cross with the Houdan. From these crosses, without any special method, the present Faverolle was developed, in much the same manner that the Rhode Island Red has been developed in our own country. The various types of the Faverolle vary considerably, some showing decided Cochin or Brahma characteristics in gait and build, also the black mottled plumage of the Houdan. See cut.

The distinctive point of the Faverolle is the size as compared with other French breeds, together with the amount and delicacy of the flesh, which makes the poultry from this variety especially esteemed in the large markets of France. It is regarded for table purposes as superior to the Houdan, having greater size, rapidity of growth, and tendency to fatten, besides possessing the fine flavor for which the Houdan is noted. The Faverolle is an excellent layer and has been recommended as a good variety to keep for profitable egg-production. The chickens are exceptionally hardy as compared with other French breeds, an advantage which breeders here have come to appreciate. Very few growers in this country keep the Faverolle, but it has been introduced to a considerable extent into England, where it is quite well liked.—Orange Judd Farmer.

NOTES FOR BEEKEEPERS.

Do not market white honey in dirty boxes.

September is the proper time to begin feeding.

To prevent robbing it is usually best to feed at night.

Every colony should have 25 to 30 pounds of stores now.

Queen rearing is a very important part of the work in the apiary.

White clover honey is the lightest in color and is considered the finest made.

The thinner the honey when extracted the more evaporation it will require.

For keeping, extracted honey is much more easily cared for than comb honey.

It is an advantage always to furnish a new swarm with a frame of young brood.

It is important with bees in winter to provide through ventilation in the hive.

Natural queens can in no way be produced except under the swarming impulse.

It is a mistake to leave honey in the hive any length of time, as it becomes yellow.

Bees will bear confinement much longer on a good quality of honey than on inferior honey.—St. Louis Republic.

LOG CHICKEN HOUSE.

It is Substantial and Can Be Built by Anyone at a Very Nominal Expense.

I enclose you the plan of chicken coop I built of logs. In building the roof that way I saved lumber and shingles. Laid all logs exactly the required length. The average size will cover 50 to 60 chickens. I did all about 7 inches in diameter. I did all the work alone. First lay the sill logs and toenail on the corners, making the logs 2 by 4 by 8 feet and by 6 by 6 feet. Spike these two together and brace from the inside so they will be perfectly plumb. Now start putting up the logs, one side at a time, or build all sides evenly as you go. Drive a spike in every 2 by 4 and by 6 inch sill and into your logs as fast as you go, so as to hold them in place. You can put a round log in the corner 6 inches in diameter and 3 feet long. After the house has been built spike the 2 by 4 onto this and also the plate logs. Peel the logs.—A. L. Lord, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Eggs for Hatching.

The selection of the eggs is the first and most important matter in the hatching of chicks. Very large eggs, small eggs, eggs sharp at both ends, eggs that have protuberances, thin-shelled eggs and such, should be discarded, as it is a waste of time using them. Eggs should be of normal size, perfect in shape, smooth and fresh. When the chicks are hatched out do not feed them much wet chicks, but keep them at work scratching for seeds, and you will have fewer cases of leg weakness and bowel disease. The matter of raising chicks, however, depends on the eggs from which they are hatched.—Farm and Fireside.

Hiding Fowls of Lice.

It is difficult to rid fowls of lice by dusting them with powders, though some of the remedies advertised are excellent. One method is to use strong soap, dipping the fowl therein and rinsing in clear water. If a teaspoonful of carbolic acid is added to the water it will be advantage. Dusting can be done by the hens themselves if they are given an opportunity by having at their disposal infested dry dirt. Keep the poultry house clean and the hens will keep their bodies clear of lice.—American Gardening.

In extracting it is essential to lift the frames of comb out gently.

NEVER CARES TO WANDER.

The Honey Bee Does Not Like to Go More Than Five Miles After Her Material.

The range of the honey bee is but little understood by the masses, many supposing that bees go for miles in search of nectar, while others think that they go only a short distance. It is a curious fact to many to understand how anyone can tell how far the bees may fly, but this is simple when understood. Years ago, when the Italian bees were first introduced in the United States, these bees, having marked different from the common bees, were easily distinguished, and after any beekeeper had obtained the Italian bees they could be observed as their range easily noted. If bees are plentiful near where they are located, they will not go very far, perhaps a mile in range, but if honey is scarce they may go five miles. Usually about three miles is as far as they may go profitably.

Bees have been known to go as far as eight miles in a straight line, crossing a body of water that distance to land. It is wonderful how the little bees can go so far from their home and ever find its way back to its own particular hive. If while the little bee is out of its home or hive, the hive should be removed some ten or twenty feet, according to the surroundings, when it came back to where its home was first located, it would be hopelessly lost. If its home were in an open space, with no other objects close, it might find its way home, but even should the hive be moved only a few feet, many of the bees would get lost.

To move a hive, if done in the winter time it would be all right, but if in the summer time it should be done after dark, or when the bees are not flying, and even then the bees should be stirred up some, and smoke blown in at the hive entrance and a board or some object placed in front of the hive so that the bees in coming out may mark their new location. Bees, no doubt, are guided by sight, and also by sense of smell. They are attracted by the color of bloom, as if they are at work on a certain kind of bloom, they are not likely to leave that particular kind of bloom for any other, as long as they can find that kind. Again, bees are often attracted to sweets by their sense of smell, for they will go after sweets, if even it is the dark if close. However, any kind of sweets may be placed in glass in plain sight, but if covered so as not to emit any smell, the bees will take no notice of them.—Baltimore American.

Proposed Alliance with England.

If the United States and England should form an alliance, the combined strength would be so great that there would be little chance for enemies to overcome us. In the past, when men and women keep up their bodily strength with Hoar's Stomach Bitters, there is little chance for attacks from disease. It is old time remedy, restores the blood, builds up the muscles, stimulates the nerves and increases the appetite. Try it.

Stop! Women,

And Consider the All-important Fact,

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman whose experience in treating women's ailments is greater than that of any living physician—male or female.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolving to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than that of any male physician in the world. The following invitation is freely offered:

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, answered, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private ills to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge which you need. She advises nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

"The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled, for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women a year."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 3, 1898. President McKinley has been given much satisfactory information on the outlook for republican success in the Congressional campaign, by his allies during the last two or three days. Among those who gave this information were Senators Hanna, of Ohio, Mason, of Ill., and Pritchard, of N. C.; Ex-Governor Merriam, of Minn.; Representatives Cannon, of Ill., and Hepburn, of Iowa, and Mr. A. E. Holtz, Chairman of the Republican State committee, of N. C. The last named told the President that the republicans would gain two Congressmen in N. C. The general tenor of all the information given the President is that the republicans have nothing to fear except the existing over-confidence, which makes it difficult to convince republican voters that their votes will be needed this year.

Since the war investigation commission began inviting editors of yellow journals to furnish the names of witnesses to prove sensational charges made by them in their papers, there has been a marked falling off in the number of such publications, but up to this time some of the yellow editors have attempted to furnish the evidence asked for. The Commission has its work pretty well mapped out, now, and this week will begin the taking of testimony. The President and Secretary Alger are both aiding the Commission in every way possible.

It is customary whenever a new Secretary of State assumes office, for him to hold a reception to the members of the diplomatic corps, for the purpose of formal introduction and the establishment of official relations. Secretary Hay, who was sworn in last week, held a reception today in the Diplomatic Room in the State Department, that was attended by representatives of every country with which we have diplomatic relations. Many of the older diplomats have long been personal friends of Secretary Hay, for whom they predict a brilliant career as Secretary of State.

The War Department gave Col. Bryan and Gov. Holcomb more than they expected when it requested the latter to decide whether the regiment of Nebraska Volunteers, now at Manila, or that commanded by Col. Bryan, shall be mustered out of the service. It was a clear case of beating these two very cute politicians at their own game. They expected the War Department to name the regiment to be mustered out, and were prepared to charge injury to the matter which was chosen. Now, they are bound to keep their mouths closed and Col. Bryan himself must take the responsibility of deciding whether his regiment remains in service or is mustered out, as it is known that he will dictate Gov. Holcomb's decision.

From almost every foreign country, comes an increased demand for American goods—we are actually selling silk in France. The following report from the United States Consul at Athens, Greece, which has just reached the Department of State, speaks for itself. "There cannot be the least doubt of the necessity of a direct line of steamships between the United States and Mediterranean ports. There is a wide field and large profits for a well managed line, and it should be an American one, flying the stars and stripes, if possible. Many of the stores of Athens—all those that kept imported articles exhibit American goods, they having been imported from England. Nearly every mail brings letters of inquiry to this consulate from merchants and manufacturers of the United States, all anxious to find a market here for their products, for it is becoming generally known that Greece imports nearly all kinds of goods and machinery. The English, German and French transportation companies that call here are doing a very good business; but the Greek imports directly from America, and thus save the profits of the middlemen."

There is much gossip in political circles concerning the comparative ease with which Boss Croker downed Ex-Senator Hill, at the New York Democratic Convention, and compelled Hill to accept Judge Van Wyck as the party candidate for Governor after he had declared most positively that he would not support any man from New York City or Brooklyn for the nomination. It is said that there was treachery among those whom Hill had counted upon to stand by him. No matter how he accomplished his purpose, there is no doubt that Croker named the wholesale ticket and that he is now the boss of the whole democratic state outfit as well as of Tammany. Neither is there any doubt that Croker's triumph has added to the certainty of Col. Roosevelt's election to the Governorship.

Senator Hanna, who is now in Washington, says that he doesn't know what the instructions given to the American Peace Commissioners, now in Paris, were, but that as regards American possession of the entire Philippine group, as an inevitable result of the signing of the Peace Commission, and expects that we will have to maintain about the same sort of government over them as we will be maintained in Cuba, until we can alter Spanish rule to conform with them. He says he bases his opinion upon the idea that he finds prevalent everywhere that we cannot alter Spanish rule to conform on any of the islands, whether we desire to keep them ourselves or not.

He Likes It.

Hon. W. McKinstry, Fremont, N. Y.
The Veteran Editor of the Fremontian Canon, writes Dr. Fenger: "I have been using your blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic, and desire to say that I like it."

I find it an admirable remedy for the sallowness, languor and nervous depression incident to the changing seasons, sufficiently phlegmic and yet not debilitating but strengthening instead."
