Texas has 108,000 more hachlers than old mads. This must be the reason it is called the Lone Star state.

American geography classes of the future will have an easy time in describing the productions of the United States. "Almost everything" will cover the subject.

European nations may acquire our superior guns and armor plates, but they cannot acquire by purchase our man behind the gun. He belongs to us, and there is none like him.

One-half of the restaurant menus in Havana are now written in English. After we occupy the town this natural mistake will be corrected and the bills of fare changed to bad French.

Col. Earl Hobson, of Bowling Green, Ky., a cousin of the new president, made a colonial for his conspicuous gallantry and courage at the battle of Pittsburgh Landing, when he was not quite 20 years old.

Prof. A. G. Webster, of Clark university, has invented an instrument which shows that there is no such thing as absolute silence. A number of married men are out in interviews claiming that they know better.

In the death of Fanny Davenport, which occurred at her home in Duxbury, Mass., the American stage has lost one of its most striking figures. Miss Davenport descended from a family of players and inherited a love for the stage which took her behind the footlights when she was only ten years of age and kept there uninterruptedly through life.

Henry Dunant, the founder of the Red Cross society, is now about 70 years old. He spent his fortune in his great work and then lost the other half by business reverses. He was in absolute want, but was sustained by the dowager empress of Russia and the federal council of Switzerland. The citizens of Stuttgart have also raised a generous subscription for him.

The floating of the Spanish armored cruiser Maria Teresa is a matter of some historical importance. She will be an object of national pride and a great naval curiosity. She was Cervara's flagship as she steamed out of the harbor of Cadiz to her collision with an American fleet. Yankee courage sunk her, and Yankee ingenuity raised her. Under our flag she enters on a new and better career.

Speaking of questions of diet, the Christian Worker has been mentioned that he can think better, pray better and see further on a changed diet or restricted diet, let him take to that, in God's name. If he is a good man, we would beseech him to avoid making the Pharisee's fuss over it, and reviling his neighbor who sees differently. This is sound sense, and is entirely harmless, but the crank with a mission is nuisance.

A peculiar trait of American character is shown in the Cervara incident. He was captured while the war spirit was highest, but as soon as he became a prisoner he was treated with the utmost consideration by the very people who might naturally be expected to manifest the greatest animosity to the old admiral had to wait until he had landed again on home soil before he could realize that he had been engaged in a war.

A New Jersey woman divorced her husband because he remained in the hospital to put on the family bill of fare. The wretched man pleaded self-defense, but the plea didn't work. He tried to show that he was a good fellow, because he didn't have the dough. He insisted that pudding is really pie with the lid mixed, and that it advanced the proposition that pie had a bad effect on his wife's temper, by making her crusty. But the judge was obstinate, and the brutal husband got his just deserts.

General Manager Rawn, of the Baltimore & Ohio South Western railway has prepared a detailed statement of the number of people carried since Cincinnati on the occasion of the thirty-second annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, September 5 to 12 inclusive. According to train records 37,997 people were transported, the largest number being on September 5, when the total reached 12,222. According to these statistics the Baltimore & Ohio South Western carried about 20 percent of the travel.

There is one locality in the world which has thus far resisted the invasion of the bicycle and that is Idaho, on the Red sea. The United States consular there, in reply to the inquiry relative to the bicycle industry in that far off quarter, reports that owing to the rough streets and hills and the heat, to which no one can expose himself on the wheel without danger, as well to the fact that the natives are too poor to buy wheels even if they wanted them, there is no prospect of the demand in this market for bicycles of any description or make.

The recent cyclone in Ontario and northern New York upsets popular theories respecting those disturbances. In the first place cyclones grow usually looked for in hot weather, whereas the temperature was low in the locality struck. Then, again, the blow came from the northwest, while all properly conducted cyclones move from southwest to northeast. Otherwise the storm observed all the time honored traditions. Its appearance was preceded by the usual "low clouds," it sucked water up from streams and cut a path through the tall trees.

WILL BE SHOT TO THE END

Bear Island Indians Must Surrender to the Government or Take the Consequences.

REBELLIOUS RED MEN GIVEN WARNING.

Officials in Washington Will Take No Chances—Inspector Tinker Issues a Manifesto—Gen. Bacon Informs Minnesota's Governor That the Situation is Bad.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 11.—War will be declared against the Bear Island Indians if they do not surrender the 20 men for whom the marshal holds warrants.

The United States government is committed to this policy by a communication sent to all the camps of the Chippewas Monday afternoon. It was formulated at the council here Monday and is as follows:

"To All Rebellious Indians: The government makes lay for you as well as for the white people who live in the neighborhood of the law. The Bear Islanders must come in and surrender without delay. They will be hunted and killed wherever they are found in both winter and summer and not allowed to return to Bear Island. The government has many soldiers already here around the lake and will have many more if need be.

ARTHUR W. TINKER, "United States Indian Inspector." No Parity in the Red Men.

Gen. Bacon will await an answer and in the meantime will strengthen his guards at strategic points. He regards the outlook as less threatening at least for a moment. He is hopeful that the Bear Islanders, when they find their backs are not to be held responsible for the killing of the soldiers, will surrender. He is hopeful that the United States Marshal O'Connell in this crisis, has no faith in the red men, and believe force will be necessary to make the fighting Pillagers respect the law.

Will Take No Chances. Washington, Oct. 11.—Officials of both the war department and the interior department are inclined to the belief that the seriousness of the Indian uprising in Minnesota has been exaggerated.

Gottry went around to each table present and presented them with a small ball of yarn and two knitting needles, each gentleman and lady then began knitting and then the fun began. W. P. Gottry was the first gentleman knitting up his ball of yarn and received as a prize a silver stick pin. Each one when they got to the end of their ball found a souvenir on the inside. At about eleven o'clock refreshments were served, after which all departed for their homes having spent a very pleasant evening. The ladies cleared about nine dollars.

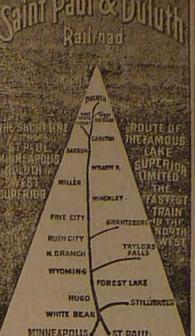

—Our little boy was afflicted with rheumatism in his knee, and at times unable to put his foot to the floor. We tried in vain, everything that we could hear of that we thought would help him. We almost gave up in despair, when some one advised us to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. We did so, and the first bottle gave so much relief that we got a second one, and to our surprise it cured him sound and well.—T. B. Bays, Pastor Christian Church, Neshoba, Kan. For sale by J. Y. Breckenridge, Druggist, Pine City.
—Who said that the auction sale held last Saturday, was not a success? It was the first good sale ever held here, and it promises to grow better and better each month. Mr. M. S. Watt is to be congratulated on the showing he made and also on the number of farmers he brought here on that day. It has been estimated that five hundred teams were in town and upwards of seven hundred people. Turn out and help a good thing along, for there is no reason why this sale day cannot be made a gala day every time it comes around. By making special offers our merchants could do a booming business, and this help to draw buyers from the surrounding counties.
—The monthly auction sale of horses, cows, etc., held here last Saturday by Mr. S. Watt, was a decided success. Mr. Watt is going to try and get, for his next sale, which will be held on the second Saturday in November, a number of new milch cows, which he will sell so cheap that all farmers who are in need of anything of the kind should not fail to be present, and get a few good cows, so as to keep the creamery going all winter. If this first auction sale is a criterion to go by, these sales promise to be a great thing for this place, and anyone having anything to dispose of should be sure and see Mr. Watt. Remember the date of the next sale—Saturday, Nov. 12.
—The St. Paul & Duluth Railroad company has had the two section crews at work this week, cleaning up the reserve, which was burned over at the time of the fire last May. The crew have done a good job, having picked up all the iron and piled it up, ready to be shipped, and the combustible material has been burned out, the brick and all been thrown into the old Berg & His cellar, and the whole reserve has been leveled off, adding much to the appearance of the village. A reporter of this paper was informed that the company intended to plant shade trees all over the reserve, and make a park of it. If they do, we will in time have the prettiest parks on the line of the road.
—On Saturday afternoon's limited the following gentlemen arrived and were driven up to Pokegama by W. P. Gottry, Doctors S. A. Beecher, Geo. Routh, E. W. Buckley, E. S. Wood, of St. Paul, M. H. Coolidge, of Dowling, Wis. There Doctors Wood and Buckley, and the Coolidge brothers spent Sunday and Monday morning hunting, and Drs. Routh and Beecher in fishing. On Sunday morning M. E. Kennedy, the sporting goods dealer of St. Paul, came up and was rowed up to the lake by his old friend, Dr. R. White, who the two spent the day, the guests of the party who went up to Pokegama the night before. They spent the day very pleasantly, and in the evening started for home in the rain. Dr. White knows the river quite well, and he informed our reporter that it was so dark that he could not see where he was going. On several occasions he ran the boat onto stumps and boomsticks, to the consternation of Mr. Kennedy, who was afraid that they would tip over, and as he could not swim he was sure if they tipped over that he should be drowned, and the Doctor took special pains to let no opportunity pass of telling him of "how close they came to this log or to that stump," and thus kept him in hot water all the way home. From the report of the boys when they got down here on Monday they must have had a fine time.

A Happy Party From the State U.

Last Saturday morning, W. P. Gottry received a dispatch from G. W. Hall, Professor of Geology and Mineralogy in the State University, asking him to have teams at the 10:54 train, to accommodate about twelve. At the appointed time two teams were in waiting, and when the train pulled in a busy of young ladies and gentlemen, students of the State U., got off, and were ready for anything that the Professor told them to do. The following students constituted the party: Misses Case, Bomberger, Gregory, Carlton, Edith and Amy Robbins, Sanderson and Webster; Messrs. Barker, Mayer, Carvy, Lyons, Stewart, Duncan, Holton, Smith, Morris, Russell, Harrison, Dunn, Hoyt, Trudell, Lovitt, Van Bergen and Everts, and Dr. C. P. Borley, instructor in mineralogy, P. Christensen, instructor in metallurgy, and C. W. Hall, Professor of Geology and Mineralogy. The young ladies and instructors were loaded into the buggies, and the gentlemen hired boats. A. E. Webber. When everyone had been provided with conveyance, the entire party started for the Indian burying ground on the north side of the river. After spending about an hour at the burying ground, they were taken to the lower copper mine, where they were left to examine the rocks on the river bank. After the teams left them they proceeded to eat their picnic dinner, after which each one of them, armed with a hammer and small pocket microscope, proceeded to crack pieces of rock thrown out at the time the copper mine was worked. After examining the rock around the shaft they followed up the bank to where the rock ends, where the party again took team, and drove up to the dam where the greater portion of them got out and walked over the dam, which is being rebuilt by A. Munch. Some of the boys were gathering moss and fungus for the botanical class at the University, and found rare specimens on the rocks in the river bed at and below the dam.
After crossing the river, the young gentleman cooking for the crew building the dam, sent out a plate of ginger-snaps and cookies and treated the entire party, who then proceeded down the south shore of the State and examined the rocks on that shore, after which they started for town. After being driven all over town, and shown the school house, the court house, the churches, and other points of interest, they were deposited at the depot at a quarter to 4, where they remained until half-past 4, when they took the down train for the Twin Cities. They were all very much taken with the village and its surrounding scenery, and only regretted that they could not stay a week and examine the formation of rock to be found below the dam on the south side of the river.
Some of the young ladies said that in the future they knew where they could spend Sunday to good advantage. A Professor has taken his class to different parts of the state, examining the different strata of rock, but has never found in the state such a place as this, with such a variety of different formations of rock so close together. The Professor brought the students up here for the purpose of finding out one particular kind of formation, which they found, besides quite a number of interesting facts. The class were well pleased with their trip, and say that they hope the Professor will bring them up here often.

THE STORY TELLER

PROVING HIS METTLE

By STEPHEN R. BAKER.

RICHARD PARMENTER, senior member of the big mercantile firm of Parmenter, was seated in his chair as the door of his private office was quietly opened and a slender youth stepped respectfully inside.

"Well?"

"The merchant asked the question after a brief but critical survey of the figure before him."

"I am Anson Hoover," answered the youth, quietly.

"The son of Jerome Hoover?"

"Yes, sir, and your nephew, I believe."

"Um-hm, yes, but why my sister ever married that—"

"I should prefer, sir, that you speak more respectfully of my dead father."

"The man of business under the rebuff, so coolly yet respectfully given."

"Dead! I didn't know. And your mother? You know we lost trace of her after the unfortunate marriage, though I did hear of your birth."

"My mother died last week, sir," replied Anson, with a suppressed sob in his voice.

Richard Parmenter turned abruptly away, and gazed vacantly out of the window, while a sorrowful expression stole over his grizzled countenance.

"Poor Annie," he murmured.

Then, reassuming his brusque manner, he turned again to the youth before him.

"What was your business with me?" he asked.

"I have always wanted to go to college, sir," Anson responded, with some diffidence, "and mother said you might be willing to lend me aid."

"What profession do you wish to follow?"

"I believe that whatever talent I have lies in a mechanical line, sir."

"Then an engineering course would be best, probably. And you want me to lend you aid? What security can you give me that I shall ever be repaid?"

"None, sir, except the pledge of my honor."

"I am not in the habit of loaning money on such security," answered Mr. Parmenter, "but at a moment's notice I called, more kindly, as Anson was turning away with an angry flush in his cheeks."

"The lad halted, and waited in silence for his uncle to speak."

"Though I cannot loan you any money under the circumstances, I do not feel like turning you adrift in the world. Are you willing to work?"

"Yes, indeed, sir."

"Then report to-morrow in the hardware and implement department, and Mr. Smith will put you in a place where you can earn a good salary, though I warn you that it will require hard work."

"Thank you, sir. I trust I shall prove that I am not afraid of hard work."

"In a business way I will be Mr. Parmenter," interrupted the merchant, turning to his desk as a sign of dismissal.

Promptly at the appointed hour Anson reported to Mr. Smith, the head of the hardware and farming implement departments, and was at once initiated into the duties of his new position. Here he found that his uncle's predictions regarding hard work were fully verified. "Parmenter Bros" were located in Bellevue, a most fertile little city, surrounded by the richest farming regions in the west. There the trade in agricultural appliances was very large, and competition was sharp.

Day after day Anson toiled away in his new position, gradually becoming inured to the heavy work. His hands hardened, and his muscles became like bands of steel. He gained many smiles of approbation from Mr. Smith, and rendered valuable aid to that gentleman in setting up machinery, a sort of work in which he found great pleasure. Every Saturday night a proportion of his wages was left on deposit for his plan of obtaining a further education was never abandoned.

Had Anson known of a certain conversation which took place between Mr. Smith and his uncle, his heart would have been filled with pleasure and with hope.

"How is that boy making out in your department, Mr. Smith?" Mr. Parmenter had asked.

"Finely," answered the employee.

"He is willing to work, quick to learn, and a regular mechanical genius. Often he is quicker than I myself to see the construction of a new machine."

"He's a fine lad," was his comment, "and the experience will do him good."

It so happened that this summer Parmenter Bros. undertook the introduction of a new threading machine, which was a radical change from the regular style. When the first machine arrived it attracted much attention, and Anson Hoover was completely fascinated with its details. All of his spare time was utilized in studying the principles upon which the action depended, and it was with a feeling of proud regret that he saw the machine sold. An unusual amount of interest was taken in this sale, since the machine was in the nature of an experiment. If it worked successfully, other sales would be made by Parmenter Bros. but its failure meant a considerable loss for them and gain for their competitors. Therefore it was with some anxiety that the members of the firm saw Mr. Smith leave Bellevue the day of the sale, his head clerk having been called to a distant city by the dangerous illness of his mother.

Two days later the elder Parmenter returned to the implement department and began an earnest conversation with Simpson, one of the under-clerks.

SMALL GREENHOUSE.

A Help to Those Who Wish to Make a Start as Florists in a Small, Modest Way.

The plan of a greenhouse here shown is intended as a help to those who would like to start as florists in a small way but who are not able to do so because the ordinary greenhouse is so very expensive. A trench is dug along the eastern side of dwelling house; if it has a cellar six feet deep the trench should be four feet wide and four feet deep, a door is cut in the cellar wall (m), and the trench should be boarded up on the side opposite the wall to prevent earth caving in.

A door is placed in the south end and steps lead up to it. This door can be used with the extreme cold weather sets in; then it should be fastened until mild weather returns. A tank of water is kept at the north end of the trench, and tools of all sorts should hang from nails driven into the side of the dwelling house.

This little greenhouse may be built as long or as short as the builder desires and the size of the main house will allow, but it should be six feet wide. It gets a good deal of heat from the house. Two holes are cut through into rooms where fires burn all night throughout the winter if there is no fire in the house.

With better understanding of the means for fighting insects and fungous diseases, the growing of fine fruit is much less hazardous than it used to be. Much, however, depends on having a good location and soil, and the small farm on a good near retail market. This, of course, limits the amount that each individual grower can produce. At least part of the crop ought always to be sold at retail. The farmer who goes into fruit growing depending wholly on selling it to commission houses, will find many profitable takers between the field and the consumer that his own share in the profit will be nothing—American Cultivator.

The Cost of Erecting Cabs.
The United States is certainly entitled to retain possession of the motor vehicle, but the price commissioners so decide, for the cost of the car runs up to $10,000, and the end is not yet. The money paid out reaches an astounding total. From the stomach, liver, bowels and blood of disease, however, is a man an expensive property. A few dollars invested in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will accomplish the most easily. The poor will see the rich can afford it.

Free to Teachers and Scholars.
In 1897 we had thousands of requests from teachers and scholars for "Wonders and '97." The edition a large one was exhausted long before the end of the year. "Wonders and '98" can now not only be supplied to those unable to secure the former, but also to others. It is entirely different, however, from the first one's book. It has a chapter on The Agricultural Northwest, crammed full of valuable information, one on Yellowstone Park, written especially for teachers, another on Alaska and Klondike, and one on a Canon Lake Trip that is a high art cover designed by Loveland, and it is profusely illustrated from new photographs. The North-western half will send the book and a revised copy of "Wonders and '97" upon receipt of five cents in stamps or postal order. Send to Chas. C. Freese, Editor, Chicago Daily News, 115 N. And why give them a chance to guess you are even five or ten years more?
Better give them good reasons for guessing the other way. It is very easy; for nothing talks of age so quickly as gray hair.

It is a youth-renewer.
It hides the age under a luxuriant growth of hair the color of youth.
It never fails to restore color to gray hair. It will stop the hair from coming out also.
It feeds the hair bulbs. Thin hair becomes thick long and short hair becomes long hair.
It cleanses the scalp; removes all dandruff, and prevents its formation.
We have a book on the Hair which will gladly send you.

THE VICAR'S SERMON

By DOMINIQUE MONRO.

IT WAS all to no purpose, Lady Matilda might forever argue, and "papa" forever sigh—ill Betty chose to leave herself to the vicar, and she did not intend to please her fond parents.

And after all, even the dear old dame who sat over their refreshing dish of best tea, straight from the far east, and discussed the "amorous oddities" who had dared to sue for Betty's hand and heart, even they were obliged to own that no one whom they could consider a suitable partner, from all points of view, had yet appeared upon the scene.

"This is Sophie's daughter," said Miss Janet, daintily dipping a dish of tea at Cousin Minnie's house; "who could imagine the dear thing married to him?"

"He is very short I own, and far from prepossessing, but then, dear Cousin Minnie, the girl is—"

"Quite as large as his! Well, well, money is not all that constitutes a happy marriage," said Miss Janet, and sighed and gazed into her cup as if in a dreamy way. "Now Maj. Tomlin, Minnie?"

"Glad to preserve the young lamb from him!" ejaculated Minnie, piously, with uplifted hands and eyebrows to correspond.

"He is a handsome—" commenced Miss Janet.

"Godless fool," added the other, and the force with which she said it made poor Janet jump.

"There's Dr. Jones," she hastened to say, but Minnie only laughed.

"Why not mention Lawyer Robinson, or Mr. Pottle, the vicar," she answered merrily, at which Miss Janet shook her head and joined most heartily in her cousin's mirth, till tears rolled down the dear little lady's face, and she rubbed them away vigorously with a handkerchief.

Suddenly she ceased laughing, and leaning across the table, on which were set the pretty china tea service and the antique silver kettle, she whispered mysteriously: "I am not so sure but that the dear thing hasn't chosen her beau herself. Mark my words, cousin, if it were Betty married at all she will marry the vicar's curate, young Parson Campbell!"

"Parson Campbell! Mercy on us, Janet! He's but a boy, and a poor boy at that; he has not much over £100 a year, if that—he narrows her? No, no, no, can't be possible!"

"I don't see why you set so much store by money, Cousin Minnie. Miss Betty has a pretty penny of her own—besides, he's of good family, being Sir Murray's only son, and though in truth his father is but a pauper baronet!"

"Whilst these little ladies were discussing Betty's love affairs to their heart's content, that young lady was engaged in a very love-like dispute with Parson Campbell himself, and hidden as they were by ferns and flowers from the inquisitive gaze of countless couples in the ballroom of Sir Peter Mackenzie's mansion in Cavendish square, they were at full liberty to follow the bent of their own minds and flirt and quarrel as the fancy took them.

"Dear me, they took them each a separate way.

Now this aggravating missy could not see a lovelorn look just thrown in her direction, or hear a love-sick sigh, or a few sweet words of sentiment, but she must be on her dignity! And as neither would give in it had ended in a lover's quarrel.

She had just refused to sit out another dance.

"Well, will you come and bear me preach on Sunday week?" he asked, pleadingly.

"He knew he could persuade Lady Matilda to lunch with him in company with her daughter, after the service, if he once got them to attend his church, which was some distance from Sir Peter's country seat.

"Yes, yes," impatiently, and then she added: "Thank you."

"Are you still faint, Miss Betty? Won't you look up, won't you let me see your dear little face?" And Donald touched the rim of her bonnet with his hand.

"Then Betty did a strange thing—she sprang from his side, and threw back her head, and laughed, and laughed, and laughed again.

"I'm a horrid, naughty girl," she said; "my faintness was a sham—an excuse—O, Donald!"—first glancing carefully round to see if there were out of sight—"O, Donald—I fell fast asleep"—and her eyes dropped and sought the ground, and her face was crimson—she was waiting for his clerical reproof.

"For a moment Donald Campbell stared at her in silence, and then with a light-hearted laugh he caught her in his arms.

"Don't look so sweet, my darling, or I shall kiss you quite away," he said, and then in a solemn tone: "The vicar's sermon, too!"

Somehow she didn't mind his reproof at all, she only blushed the more, and when he did kiss her once, if you will believe me, she held up her rosy lips for more—and there was no one to see but the frows, and she, poor thing, was very old and feeble.

And laughing and laughing she returned by the path they had come to ask the blessing of the elder couple on them both.

As if he heard on the best authority that a quiet but a wedding took place in that same little church within two calendar months, and that the happy couple were Donald Campbell and Betty Mackenzie, we may conclude the blessing given with a right good will.—Idem.

A SAD PICNIC PARTY.

The Story of the Luncheon Which Never Came—A Hungry and Disappointed Crowd.

The sad story of an ambitious hostess and her blighted hopes comes from the Berkshire hills, where a certain gay luncheon party is being entertained in lively and luxurious fashion. The ambitious hostess had proposed as the crowning vivacity of the week a picnic in the woods. Joyous exclamations from everyone. Offers from the women to hold eggs and make milk lemonade, and from the men to carry the heavy baskets and gather wood for the camp fire. But the hostess laughed and shook her head. She did not need any assistance, she said. She would have all the goodies sent by wagon to theylvan dell where they were to be eaten. No one should have any care except to enjoy himself or herself, and everything would be planned for the day.

The picnic dawned cool and clear. The ride to the secluded spot, high up among the pines, was a delightful one. Everyone was in exuberant spirits.

As the time for luncheon approached, a heavy shower of rain fell. The picnicers, who had volunteered to carry heavy baskets and make sandwiches, were all busy about, eating berries. One girl who was a bit of a gormand said that there were to be sandwiches of lettuce and cheese, crab and chicken, some cakes and champagne and claret cups. She had heard her hostess conferring with her butler the night before. Then conversation began to lull in couples and trios the hungry hostess party strolled down the road to see what the weather was doing.

The host shook signs of anxiety. One cheerful youth remarked that the road was a very heavy one for horses and that it would be a pleasant ride home in the dark. Finally it dawned upon them that something was amiss, and the entire party set forth to their tents in a hurry.

The mountain they found the ruins of that had once been a smart cart, one wheel off, and remnants of cups, plates, sliced pineapples and other delicacies strewn the road, while inside the village, the old man who had drawn his sorrow at the loss of a wheel, in copious draughts of "mountain dew" was the driver. It is needless to dwell upon the feelings of the ambitious hostess. She dissolved in tears, but the husband profited the profanity to fit the occasion.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

IN THE WRONG SHOP.
There Were Too Many Hones Wrong for the Osteopathist to Put in Place.

"Are you the doctor that makes new bones grow?" asked a man who had waited a long time at the outside office of a leading physician.

"I am an osteopathist," said the doctor, "if that is what you mean."

"A what?"

"I practice osteopathy—the manipulating and mending of broken bones."

"Kerret, I guess I've had as many bones broken as the next man, and if you can fix me up good as new I'll be much obliged and pay the bill hundred likewise."

"All right," said the doctor, as he led the way into his private office. "Just sit down in that chair and relax."

"How?"

"Let your muscles loose. Don't try to keep together. Now go back to your early fancy and tell me every accident that ever happened to you, and what result followed."

"S' that they would have that took me was fallin' outed before I was a year old."

"What was the result?"

"Why, I proved the folks that I warn't a fool. 'Tbout a youngster tumbles out of bed or downstairs afore his first year is up he ain't considered bright. I did both—yes, by jiminy crickey, I did!"

"And your next accident?" suggested the doctor.

"There ain't no next. There was just one continued chapter to frank to on. I broke from the tryin' to fly and dished my collar bone at the same time. When I end ride the 'olt to water, he ran off and gave me this Roanin case—his name 's 't. I put the 'olt in him to harness he kicked over the dasher, an' that's when I lost my front teeth. I've had both legs broken, and one arm in three places. This are hole in my shoulder ain't from a bullet—it's where our old cow hooked me for half a day. This bone in my left wrist got mashed in a separator, and four of my fingers was wrenched at the same time. My elbows—"

"Stop!" shouted the doctor, rising hurriedly and handing the broken-up man his hat. "You've mistaken the place. You've been to the anatomical museum on the next street and have your skeleton articulated. Good day, sir."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Suffering Nervous.
Over and over again the old truth comes back to us that no man is good for much until he has suffered a great sorrow. The baptism of pain is one of the best purgatives which God has ordained for purging away the dross of our nature and making us fit to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light. Not those who have escaped the life of pain, but those who have gone through it and come out unharmed and glorified, are to be envied. God knows what is best for us. Therefore he sends first one affliction and then another until he has purged us, he sees it necessary. He lifts the veil of floodgate, and allows wave after wave of misfortune to sweep over us. If we have the right spirit in us, we shall be strengthened and made more and more becoming calamities.—Detroit Free Press.

MRS. PINKHAM TALKS TO THE FUTURE WOMAN.

Will the New Generation of Women be More Beautiful or Less So? Miss Jessie E. Pinkham's Experience.

A pleasing face and graceful figure! These are qualities which women of the future will prize. How can a woman have grace of movement when she is suffering from some disorder that gives her those awful bearing-down sensations. How can she retain her beautiful face when she is nervous and racked with pain?

Young women, think of your future and provide against ill health. Mothers, think of your growing daughter, and prevent in her as well as in yourself irregularity or suspension of nature's duties.

If puzzled, don't trust your own judgment. Mrs. Pinkham will charge you nothing for her advice; write to her at Lynn, Mass., and she will tell you how to make yourself healthy and strong.

Lynia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound strengthens the female organs and regulates the menses as nothing else will. Following is a letter from Miss Jessie E. Pinkham, 1712 West Jefferson St., Sandusky, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to let you know of the great benefit your remedies have been to me. I suffered for over a year with inflammation of the ovaries. I had doctored, but no relief did me any good. Was at a sanitarium for two weeks. The doctor thought an operation necessary, but I made up my mind to give your medicine a trial before submitting to that. I was also troubled with leucorrhoea, painful menstruation, dizziness, nervousness, and was so weak that I was unable to stand or walk. I have taken in all several bottles of your 'Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now in good health. I will always give your medicine the highest praise."
