WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, June 25th, 1901.

Confidence is expressed in official circles that the explanation made by Secretary Hay to the Russian Ambassador, to put a stop to the tariff war with Russia, before it goes any further, but the same confidence is not felt by the general public.

The fight to oust Commissioner Evans from the head of the Pension Bureau is being pushed with renewed energy, but the Commissioner still holds the fort and appears to be backed by the President, and says he will not resign.

Secretary Hitchcock says preparations for the opening to settlement of the Indian reservation in Oklahoma, are about completed, and it is understood that work on the President's proclamation, announcing the date for the opening, has been started.

Mistakes in stanz up was in coming to one in the way of privileges are common enough everywhere, but they are not all as costly as those made by John McQuade. John's father is Secretary Root's coachman, and through that fact, John got his name on the pay roll of the War Department. Then John made the mistake of supposing that he was privileged to ignore all rules and regulations made to govern the employes of that Department. He was called up and disciplined and to emphasize the matter on his mind, he was furloughed for a few days. That might have reduced John's head to its normal size, had he not filled himself with the juices that Mrs. Nation likes to spill. That gave him some new ideas about the privileges coming to him, which he proceeded to try to enjoy. One of these was the right to lick the appointment clerk. John being big and burly, and the appointment clerk a little fellow, he was having everything his own way, until other employes stopped the fight. John now has the privilege of finding another job, as his name has been crossed off Uncle Sam's roll.

Saturday afternoon at about four o'clock three boys, Jacob Hunt, Lee Wilcox and Robert Ives went down in swimming in the south arm of Cross lake near the residence of J. D. Wilcox. Jacob Hunt and Lee Wilcox could swim but Robert Ives was just learning and could swim but a few strokes. The boys found a boom stick and the Hunt and Wilcox boys swam out to the front end of the stick one on each side of the stick and started out to a raft that anchored about ten or twelve rods from shore. As they started from shore the Ives boy took hold of the back end of the boom stick and the other two boys towed him out to the raft where the water was a little over twenty feet deep, when reaching the raft Jacob Hunt got out onto the raft immediately but Robert Ives and Lee Wilcox lay over the boom stick for quite a few minutes. Lee Wilcox got out on the raft but the Ives boy was swimming around close to the raft and boom stick. After swimming around the raft for some time he thought he would push himself out a little further from the raft and swim back. He pushed himself away about six or eight feet and started to swim back and had taken but two or three strokes when he went down, and the Wilcox boy jumped in after him and they both went down, the Ives boy grabbing hold of him in such a manner that he was helpless, when they came up Jacob Hunt also jumped in to help the two out and they caught him and took him down with them, by a super-human effort he broke away from them but not before he had swallowed some water, when he came to the surface it was all that he could do to get to the raft. He got out on the raft and saw the boys, aching about these feet under water locked in each others arms. He rested for a few moments when he swam ashore and gave the alarm. In a short time the lake was covered with boats and men dragging for the bodies. At 5:50 the Ives boy was found and the Wilcox boy at 6:30. Everything known to medical science was done to resuscitate them but with no results as they were beyond the reach of human aid.

PINE CITY, MINN. JUNE 28, 1901.

Another Sad Accident.

Wednesday evening the sad news was received that Jas. Connaker was killed up near Rutledge.

James Connaker was the third son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Connaker who lives about two miles and a half south-west of town.

The first of last April James went up on the drive for the Rutledge Lumber Co. and was at work on little Bremen creek taking in the rear.

While the high water had washed away the earth from the roots of a tree and while he was working on the creek under the tree, it fell, striking him on the neck and shoulders killing him instantly.

He was carried immediately to a farm house a short distance away and then taken to Rutledge and his remains brought here yesterday morning.

James Connaker was born in county Norway, Ireland, and came to this country with his parents nine years ago last April, they coming direct to this place and settled on the farm they now live on.

James was a fine boy and his friends were only limited by his acquaintances. He will be buried to-day at 9 o'clock a. m. from St. Mary's church with interment in the Catholic cemetery.

The Pioneer extends sympathy to the bereaved family.

HER FOURTH.

"It's only my Fourth," good Dame July, To the wondering neighbors that hurried by,
"He is just a little bit noisy and wild, I must confess, but the dearest child. My others are all of them gentle and mild. But children differ—it's always so—And boys will be boys, of course, you know."
And down on her motherly knees she went, And helped him to fire off his gun, content. Though her fingers were burned and her apron cut,
And her ribbons all spotted and stained.
From a street to cellar he tumbled and ran, Through the neat little, sweet little house. He screwed the party hats on the girls. The walls reechoed with riot and noise. He broke her china and ruffled her hair. And wore all his pretty new carpets bare; And the sun went down, and the stars came out. To see what the racket was all about; And at twelve of the clock with a great shout.
The frightened child's said Dame July, And she looked at the clock with a heart-felt sigh.
As she rubbed her cap with care, "I hope he has had a good time, dear. And will stay asleep for at least a year! The sweetest children sometimes, I find. Are a trifle wanting to the boys and girls. For boys will be boys, and I'm rather glad. My Fourth was the only one who did. I'm a little bit tired," she said, And went to sleep in her chair.

FOURTH OF JULY FRESH AIR FUND

HERE were two schoolhouses in the Fifth ward. One for the Kindergarten and the other for the Primary and the two lowest classes in the Grammar. The other for the seven higher classes. Miss Swinton was the principal of the lower school and Mr. Surphen the principal of the higher. Two such popular teachers had never been known in Albion, stout and firm yet gentle and kind, popular with everyone and universally respected. Miss Swinton always had an adoring circle of girls, yes, and boys, too, around her at recess-time. To-day there was more than the usual crowd—but they stood a little way back, and only the Thompson twins leaned on her chair, one on each side of her, and fingered her chain and rings and looked up adoringly into the kind brown eyes.
"Dear Miss Swinton, that that story you told us yesterday all true, every bit of it?" asked Dottie.
"And is the little girl going to die if she can't get away by the salt water?" cried Tot.
"And did her father die down in Cuba?"
"And did her mother go out to nurse her father and catch the fever and die, too?"
"And is her auntie sick and lame so she can't work for money, but only get a home allowance for working for that stingy old banker?"
"Sh! Sh! Dottie—you must!"—began Miss Swinton, but Dottie hurried on her question so quickly she had no time to say any more.
"And is her uncle 'way up in the Klondike, and—"
Then both chimed in together:
"And is he all the relation she's got, and don't they know where he is—and will she die—certain sure—before they could possibly find him?"
Miss Swinton laid her hand on Dottie's head in answer to all these questions so fast that she looked a good deal like a Chinese mandarin—and now when the twins stopped to take breath she answered:
"Yes, yes, my dears, it is all true, every bit of it. Dear little Sallie Manson is so very, very weak that the doctor says she can never get well unless she can get away for a month at least to the seashore and have good, nourishing, wholesome food, and her poor and almost distracted, for though the hospital people will find her a home for a week or perhaps two, there would be no one to take care of her, and two weeks would not be long enough."
Then the twins straightened up and walked away without even stopping to hug their kins. And very truly, Miss Swinton's admirers followed them, and Miss Swinton sat there looking after them with a queer little half-puzzled smile.
"I wonder what her those children have got in their clothes now," she said to herself.

Meanwhile Dottie and Tottie, as everybody called them, though their real names were Sarah Josephine and Amelia Ann, walked straight down to the playground, and all the primary scholars followed them, and they found all the big girls and kindergarten tots waiting for them in the shade under the big elm.
"What did she say?" cried the biggest girl.
"It's all true—every bit!" anxiously asked the very tiniest one.
"The twins nodded solemnly and Dottie cried:
"And I most know that lovely Miss Swinton is going to give up her vacation and spend the money for that poor sick Sallie—and she didn't ought to, 'cos she's all run-down anyway, my mother says, and first thing she knows she'll be sick herself," and Dottie nodded mournfully "round on her companions and gave a pathetic little sniff.
"And whatever should we do if Miss Swinton die—d," dolefully mourned Tottie.
By themselves the Kindergarten tots and more than half of the Primaries were in tears, and the rest were silent, so full he couldn't get it very close together, and they all marched over to a bench, keeping step like soldiers, and stopped in front of the Thompson twins.
"You had to stop in front of both of them, because they were always just as close together as they could possibly get."
"Miss Dottie Thompson and— and— young ladies," began Tommy Trent, with a defiant and yet beautiful glance at Argie Davis. "You have slandered and insulted us boys by saying we couldn't be generous and self-sacrificing and us boys want to know that there's all our Fourth of July money—in a bunch—and us boys want to know where's yours—and you can have it all and welcome. And as my father says: 'Now put up or shut up!' And we wish it was more—and we don't want anybody to die and now Miss Swinton can go on her vacation—and—and—that's all." And with a very red face Tommy turned and tried to bolt.
But Argie Davis was too quick for him. She caught him by the front of his jacket with one hand, and with her eyes full of tears and her pretty face all flushed with surprise and joy, she held out the other hand to him, crying:

"Shake hands, Tommy. I'll take it all back. Boys can be generous and self-sacrificing and smart too, Tommy." Then she laughed a little and Tommy twisted away, and with a shout of "Come on, fellows!" ran down to the fence and jumped over it—three times—standing jump, and it was most as high as Tommy's head, too.
Nobody stopped to play on the way home that noon. Everybody ran just as fast as their legs could carry them—that is—everybody but the Thompson twins. They walked very slowly indeed, weighed down by the responsibility of taking care of all that money.
Miss Swinton, when she went to the window at five minutes past 12, wondering at the unusual silence, opened her eyes in astonishment. Not a boy or girl was in sight except the Thompson twins, and they were slowly and carefully turning the corner.
That afternoon when school opened Dottie and Tot walked up to Miss Swinton's desk and carefully laid on it two open boxes. One was nearly full of pennies, five-cent bits, dimes, quarters and halves, and one big silver "sear-wheel." In the other reposed a leather pouch from whose open mouth issued a perfect stream of round coins.
"Yessem," said Dottie, in answer to an inquiring glance from her teacher. "They're from us—it's the money for our freereakers."
"And lemonade and ice cream," put in Tottie.
"And why do you bring it to me? Do you want me to buy them for you so you can celebrate here at school?"
"Oh, no!" pleased cried Dottie; "give it to Sallie Manson and then—"
"And then you can go away."
"And have a vacation."
"And you won't get tired out and die—e," finished the twins together, throwing four chubby arms round Miss Swinton's neck and bursting into tears, while they hugged her till they almost choked her to death.
When she could get her breath, Miss Swinton thanked them all in such simple, earnest words that even the tiniest child understood how good and brave and kind she thought they were. Then she kissed all the girls and shook hands with all the boys—and a prouder, happier lot of children never danced and made merry in the world, all on any Fourth of July than the Thompson twins and their classmates.
To be sure, there weren't any fireworks or refreshments. But the boy face of Sallie's aunt, as she thanked them all for the chance of life they had given her little niece, was better than all the fireworks in the world. When Mr. Sutphen made them a speech and told them how proud he was of the boys and girls of Ward Five, it filled their hearts so full that they had a whole lot of refreshments.
And did the big, big boys and girls in Mr. Sutphen's own school do anything to help?
Why, of course they did! You don't suppose they would let the little ones get ahead of them in generosity, did you?
And between the two schools they raised a little over $200. So you see there was enough to let Miss Manson go with Sallie to take care of her, and when she came back in the fall, just before Thanksgiving, "Sally old Barker" told her and she only let her Sallie to stay with her until her uncle came back.

"You're likely she'll eat enough to bankrupt me," he muttered. "Say, how I ain't goin' to let no parcel of children get ahead of me."
In spite of the absence of fireworks, and lemonade, and ice cream, all the children—boys and girls too—agreed that they'd never had so joyous a Fourth of July before, and they chided their minds the next year.
"What happened? Oh, you can guess, can't you? Well, I'll help you out a little. I'll just whisper two or three words in your ear—Sallie's uncle—Klondike!"—Ladies' World, New York.

THE "GLORIOUS FOURTH."

The Adult American who thinks what a gasp it would make in the memories which he treasures to wipe out all those relating to the Fourth of July will scarcely object to the noise of that fearsome festival, even though he freely admits that it is no longer the music that once it was to him.
The Fourth of July is the one distinctively American holiday. Scientists cannot dig down in the records and discover that the Chinese knew about it thousands of years ago. It belongs solely to us, and if any foreigner does not like the way we celebrate it he would do well to keep his objections to himself.
At the same time the dreary lists of killed, maimed and grievously stricken, the tortured nerves of feeble folk, the burning houses and all the other sorry results of alambic patriotism show us that the "glorious Fourth" is in some respects an ignominious day which needs reforming along lines that shall eliminate from it mayhem, child slaughter and arson and shall restore those elements of real happiness and pleasing celebration which have been frightened away by broadsides from the horse pistols of howling idiots and ceaseless cannonading by the deadly paper tubes loaded with dynamite.
The Fourth of July is unquestionably a good thing, however—if you survive it.—Chicago Daily Record.

THE TRUE LOVE OF COUNTRY

Always Puts First and Foremost Loyalty to Highest Ideals of Character and Conduct.
The nation to which we belong has become a very different nation in important respects within recent years. It has assumed new and different responsibilities. Its relation to other nations has altered materially and finally. It is not strange that differences of opinion about many questions have arisen. But one thing remains certain. The nature of patriotism, that is, the true love of country, never alters, and the true patriot who believes the new conditions must not expect that new principles are to be revealed to him, but that the old familiar principles are to find new opportunities, and perhaps new methods, of illustration and service. As the national celebration of independence returns, it can bring with it the more fully beneficial suggestion that this—that true love of country always is one and the same, and that it puts first and foremost loyalty to the highest ideals of character and conduct which God has revealed to man.—Boston Congregationalist.

Hurray for the girls! Hurray for the boys! Hurray for the Fourth! Hurray for the boy!

CORN FOR THE SILO.

Velocity in the selected should be one that should attain maturity before frost.

The more corn there is put into the silo the greater will be the value of the product removed from the silo. There is a popular notion that the ensilage of corn adds something to its value which is not contained in the original material. This notion is wrong, and the greater the silage the greater the feed value of the ensilage will be. Corn should be planted for the silo but little, if any, thicker on the ground than it should be planted where the object is to produce grain. Corn is distinctively a sun plant, and if it is so thickly planted that the sun cannot reach all parts of the plant there is produced a product which is lacking in digestibility and which is not relished by farm stock.

A few years ago the North gave us the following results from experiments conducted by the Cornell experiment station, the object being to determine what method of planting corn produced the greatest food value. Certain plots were drilled in thickly so that no cars would develop, others were planted with the row 40 inches apart and with the plants close together in the row, and other plots were planted in hills from three to 3 1/2 feet apart. While a larger quantity of produce was obtained per acre where the corn was drilled in thickly, yet it contained a higher per cent of moisture and was deficient in protein and in fat.

While the moisture value of the broadcast corn is not very different from the value of that grown on the other plot, this estimate does not take into account the digestibility of the various products.

The variety of corn which shall be planted must be determined somewhat by local conditions. In central New York the Princeton No. 40 gives very satisfactory results. Whatever variety is selected, it should be one which shall approach maturity before frost. The man who plants so thickly that he cuts it with the reaper is surely failing to get best results, says Country Gentleman, in conclusion to the foregoing advice.

TALK WITH FARMERS.

The Man Who Wants His Something of a Grower, He Tells Nothing But the Truth.

One must own enough farm implements and animals to do his work rightly. A poor man cannot own horses valued at $100 each, but his poverty is no excuse for poor, second-hand, half-bred "stacks of bones." Make barn more for comfort than for style, but do not be afraid to fix up your outbuildings, barns, sheds and chicken houses—so as to have the appearance that indicates that a well-to-do farmer dwells there. Build your barns with plenty of hay and implement room. Do all the fall breaking you can. If need be, hire a man with team and plow to assist you. Do not work your team to death. Do not make the boys do the work while you sit beneath the shade, idling away the hours, and don't make your girls get out in the field to the drudgery of farm work. Do not say "We'll feed them for their work, and I'll just put them to raking stalks or hoeing corn." It is to be hoped young men will see them if you do, and take pity on the poor things. If they were manly they would marry them to relieve their father, and more especially to relieve the girls of their burdensome parent. Give your sons and daughters a good school education if nothing more. Don't send them one day and stop them every other term to keep them at home all the time. I would tell you not to maltreat dumb animals, but that story has grown old, ever so old, and every farmer mistreats his stock just the same. He feeds them little and beats them much; while we all know it should be versa—M. Louis Mertins, in Prairie Farmer.

A Heavy Tin on Farmers.

At a recent Wisconsin farmers' convention, Prof. Henry said that about 200,000 acres of corn are raised annually, and that they could avoid enormous loss by applying a simple remedy to the seed grain, says the Wisconsin Farmer. One pound of 40 per cent formalin dissolved in 50 bushels of oats and thoroughly shoveled over, would kill the smut spores, thus freeing the seed of the germ, but causes much loss of the seed. It is worth of the drug will treat 50 bushels of seed. The farmer who knows about this simple and inexpensive remedy and fails to apply it, thereby has not his own interest at heart.

LIFE IN THE COUNTRY. MINNESOTA NEWS.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Lightning Struck Street Home with variations on the electric connections at the home of Louis L. Dunn, Minneapolis. The front of the building was wrecked, and every carpet in the house ripped up. All electric wiring was burned out, and the fire broke out in the floor, while the telephone box went up in smoke.

Forty people were in the house when it was struck, and that none of them were killed is miraculous. A resident was given by Miss Anna O'Dowd, a sister of Mrs. Dunn. All of Miss O'Dowd's pupils had gathered for the occasion.

Mr. Dunn and Mr. Gleason attacked the conflagration with bed quilts, and subdued the flames in the lower part of the house. Then, proceeding to the attic, they had a hard fight, because the fire there had gained good headway. Fifteen minutes from the time the lightning struck all danger from fire was past.

The appearance of the house inside was chaotic. A checker board which lay on the floor among the children was shattered into splinters. The bolt seemed to have lodged between the sash-cornices of the apartments to its work.

Crop Harvest.

There were rains nearly every day of the week. The rains came in very heavy showers, and generally accompanied by lightning and thunder. In Nobles, Murray and Redwood counties there were tornado conditions on the morning of the 11th, with violent winds covering many acres, and doing considerable loss to town and country buildings. In other parts of the southern half of the state there was a heavy rain, but no tornadoes were reported. The crops are generally seriously injured. With reasonable temperatures and abundant moisture, all the small grains are doing splendidly; late sown flax and barley, and corn coming up and growing nicely.

Grasshoppers.

Prof. E. B. Forbes has temporarily taken charge of the department of entomology at the state college of agriculture at St. Anthony Park, and is now at the Red River valley exterminating grasshoppers. He has taken up the work where Prof. Luggler left it at his death. According to a letter received by Dean Liggert, of the agricultural college, from Prof. Forbes, grasshoppers are infesting that part of the state in large numbers. The work of exterminating the pests with the famous "hopper doses," the method used by Prof. Luggler, is being successfully carried out and will lessen the pest this year. It is feared that unless all fields are carefully and thoroughly plowed this fall there will be great destruction of crops in the north-west next year.

Stranger Drowning.

By the overturning of a boat in Small lake, St. Paul, Thomas P. Cronin and Louisa Ellvanger were thrown into the water. Cronin started to swim to shore and asked the woman to cling to him, assuring her that they would be safe. Miss Ellvanger, however, clung to the boat and was later rescued by three boys. Cronin was caught in the mud and drowned. There was no part of the lake where the water was more than four feet deep. Cronin was an employe at the St. Paul Foundry and Machine Works.

Corn-Store Laid.

The laying of the cornerstone of the Norwegian seminary at St. Anthony Park was the occasion for an outpouring of the Norwegians of the Twin Cities. The delegates to the convention attended in force. When the cornerstone was laid fully 4,000 persons were on the seminary ground. Nearly all of the officers of the United Church were seated on the platform during the ceremonies, and the services were in charge of Rev. T. Tjornhom, of Fergus Falls.

Wound Up.

The affairs of the American Mining and investment company will be wound up by Albert H. Hall, who was appointed receiver by an order of Judge Pond, and who furnished a bond in the sum of $5,000 for the faithful performance of his duties. This company has occupied an elegant suite of rooms in Minneapolis for some time and was exploiting stock in the Kettle Creek and other alleged gold mines in the northwest.

News in Brief.

The total enrollment in the Minnesota schools the past year was 37,339, a gain of 1,873 over the figures for the previous year.

A 6-year-old son of Frank Meyer was drowned in the river at Hastings by falling from a raft.

H. A. Winslow, one of the best known horsemen in the northwest, died in Minneapolis from an accidental overdose of morphine.

Mrs. Herlin Schilling was sentenced to 2 1/2 years at Stillwater for the murder of Hazel Murphy in the Columbia theater brawl in Minneapolis.

The office force of the Oliver Mining company has been moved bodily from Pittsburg to Duluth.

For the fortnight ending June 17, 590 new cases of smallpox were reported to the state board of health. Secretary Bracken says that the disease is increasing, and this is due to lax methods in various districts.

AMBROSE M'KAY'S CASE.

Rockbridge, Mo., June 24th.—The neighborhood and particularly the members of Rockbridge Lodge, No. 418, A. E. & A. M., are feeling very much pleased over the recovery of Mr. Ambrose McKay, a prominent citizen and an honorary member of the Masonic Fraternity.

Mr. McKay had been suffering from Diabetes and Rheumatism, which recently threatened to end his days. His limbs were so filled with pain that he could not sleep. He was very bad.

Just then, someone suggested a new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—which has been much advertised recently, as a cure for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

After Mr. McKay had used a few doses, he commenced to improve. His pain all left him, and he is almost as well as ever. He says Dodd's Kidney Pills are worth much more than they cost. They are certainly getting a great reputation in Missouri, and many very startling cures are being reported.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men die to women, and did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances. Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not as his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician.

Mrs. G. H. CHAFFELL.

She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been consulting their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

Mrs. Chaffell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.
