WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, SEPTEMBER 16, 1901.

The announcement that President Roosevelt will retain his present Cabinet intact has somewhat surprised the country, but his present action is thought by many the wisest thing he could have done.

One thing is certain, however, there was no real basis for the rumors, a few days ago, about sweeping changes in the Cabinet. Roosevelt himself was not talking, nor was anybody very near to him doing so. Senators Platt and Hanna were not likely to spread reports of Cabinet changes, for they did not want anything of that kind to happen, and they showed an eagerness almost pathetic in letting the public know that it was not going to happen. There was, however, some reason to suppose that there would be some resignations and new appointments of one sort or another, for various reasons of party politics. President Roosevelt is a little like Cleveland in some ways. He will be dictated to he will not be driven. It was therefore believed that he would surround himself with men who were in sympathy with him, and on whom he could rely to carry out his ideas. But it appears that his ideas are in the main those of President McKinley, and that he thinks the present Cabinet can carry them out. If it cannot, then it will be time enough to see about changing.

There was a report that Roosevelt and Hay were at opposite ends of the Isthmian Canal question, but that is incorrect. When the Hay-Panamafoate treaty was expedited, it is true, Roosevelt disapproved of it rather decidedly, but since that time he has come around to "modified views," and the Secretary of State has been under the necessity of modifying the treaty since it was rejected by the Senate so that it is thought President Roosevelt may sign.

A matter in which Mr. Roosevelt is thoroughly in accord with the policy of the late President is in the effort to wipe out sectional lines. He told two or three prominent southern congressmen the other day that he intended to be president of the whole country and not of any particular section of it. Among other things he said that during the Spanish American war he had the chance to recommend a man for promotion, and three of the men whom he chose were southerners. A little more of the sort of talk will increase the fairness of atmosphere which makes old stages in politics declare that there has been a return of the "era of good feeling."

Representative Klutz, the wit of the best section of the House, was in Washington this week, and says that he has a promise from Secretary Wilson to visit North Carolina late in September if possible and look into the Appalachian Park scheme a little further. The Secretary, with Mr. Klutz, Professor McGee and some other Washington scientists, went on a trip to the top of Mount Mitchell this summer, and those interested in the proposed park are anxious that Mr. Wilson should visit Blowing Rock, the Grandfather, and other picturesque peaks of the Appalachian range. It is hoped that an appropriation for the park will be secured from Congress this winter. The celebration of the Women's Grand River is one of the most picturesque and best known mountain excursions in America, and its plan goes through the whole country as well as the North Carolina in Congress will undoubtedly have reason to be glad.

One of the appointments which may be made in the near future is that of the Range, the President's pleasure, to the post of superintendent of the State Department, a position now held by Dr. Van Rensselaer. Mr. McKinley had planned to make this appointment, and his successor will carry out his wishes in this and several other matters. There is one official, however, who is not likely to share in this advantage, and that is General Corbin. He was a personal friend of Mr. McKinley, and of Hayes and Garfield before him, and he has some reasons to suppose that he would eventually become Lieutenant-General of the army. General Mills is backed to retire in two years, and it is thought that Corbin confidently expected to succeed him. This is not likely to happen in the present course of events. Corbin and Roosevelt have not been on the best of terms, and there is really no reason for Corbin's advancement which would not apply to several other men with whom the president is more intimate.

It is not impossible, of course, that changes in the Cabinet may yet be made, for reasons of ill health in the case of Secretary Hay. It is thought that if Mr. Hay should resign, Secretary Root would take his place, and the war portfolio would be given over to General Francis V. Greene, or to Judge Taft, the Chairman of the Philippines Commission. General Greene is said to be the President's favorite candidate. But all this is in the air this far.

The incumbency of a new president, who through the youngest of all, has a larger family than any of predecessors, has started once more the discussion of the need of a new Executive Mansion. There is unfortunately no doubt that the need exists, and it is about time that something was done in the matter. In this connection some one has recalled that when President McKinley was elected for his first term, some one said that Mrs. McKinley could not live a year in a house so draughty and inconvenient. The President-elect at once set about contriving a plan by which the draughts could be lessened, and carried it out to the increased comfort of all the inmates of the White House. But it really seems as if a country as rich as this could afford to build a new house for its Chief Executive. It is a fact, though not generally known, that the President of the United States does not even have a bath room and dressing room to himself. His bathroom is a square walled-off from another room, and separated by a partition which does not reach to the ceiling, for if it did, the room beyond would have no light. There are not enough bedrooms in the house to allow the President to entertain many guests, and it actually seems necessary for Mr. Roosevelt to occupy part of his family in order to live there at all. It is worthy of the feeling of the President if he were to be truly enough, but the offices take up so much space that there is little place for home life.

PINE CITY, MINN. SEPT. 20, 1901.

Minnesota has been so busy breaking records this year that there hasn't been much time for the consideration of politics or other minor matters. The big nearly potato is the last thing to bring the North Star state into prominence, and the farmer who raises it devoutly thanks God that he is not living in the "good old Democratic days" when he considered himself in luck if he could trade a wagon load of potatoes for a pair of shoes and a pound of coffee.

Not a few Republican newspapermen have adopted the Democratic fashion of slurring Mark Hanna, "the general at principals," or rather without any general principals but just for the sake of having a target. If they would only consider the facts, there is no ground for such slurs. A year or two ago when the Democrats were making such frantic efforts to drag Senator Hanna into the labor troubles of the time it was found that his employes in Cleveland were the only ones in that line of business in the city who had no grievance and would not strike. Senator Hanna's only offense, so far as known, is that he is a very active and a very loyal Republican.

The Pine County Fair.

The Pine county fair came to a close last Thursday evening. The vegetable exhibit was the finest that has ever been seen in this part of the state, and shows exclusively that Pine county is the banner county of Northwestern Minnesota for the raising of vegetables. The fancy work department was very fine, and the display of works of art by Mrs. McKinstry and the photographic display by our artist, W. E. Poole, caused considerable comment, especially his crayon work. The exhibit of live stock was very fine and shows that this county is well adapted to the raising of fine blooded stock and horses. On Wednesday afternoon the amusement loving public were treated to a shoot by the Pine City gun club. The club was divided into two divisions and each member shot at 25 birds. The following is the score:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Murray 39, White 39, Sweeney 32, Derr 31, Kowalko 28, Linn 28, O'Brien 28, Blankenship 19, Vaughan 14, Saunders 10, Mrs. Murray 10, McAllen 10.

Total 84 Total 91

After the shoot a running race was pulled off, three horses entering. A little roan pony from Sandstone was given the pole, a black pony from St. Paul the second place and Geo. Markham's horse from Litch City the outside. Markham's horse received first money, the roan from Sandstone second money, and the black from St. Paul third. Each heat was run close and a great deal of enthusiasm was manifested in the result. The day's sport was finished by the ball game between the five departments of High City and Pine City, the result of which was notified last week. In the evening the base ball team gave a social dance in Rath's hall, which was well attended.

THURSDAY, THE LAST DAY.

Thursday morning opened up cold and cloudy and for a long time it looked as if it would rain, but about 10 o'clock it cleared up and the sun began to shine and everything looked brighter. The Harris team of base ball players came up on the morning train to play ball in the afternoon. At 10:30 the gun club had another shoot, and the score was as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Murray 21, White 21, O'Brien 17, Derr 17, Mrs. Murray 21, Laing 17, Sweeney 22, Blankenship 18, Kowalko 8, Saunders 11, Vaughan 8, McAllen 10.

Total 97 Total 92

During the forenoon the several committees awarded the premiums, a list of which we will strive to give next week. In the afternoon the memorial services were held in the court house, and at 2:30 the game of ball between Harris and Pine City was called so that the Harris boys could catch the limited, as some of them had to go home to be at work at seven o'clock that evening. Before Wilson was chosen umpire and the Harris boys went to bat first and got a goose egg for the first four innings, although succeeding in getting men on the third sack in every inning but the third; in the fifth inning they ran in five scores which ended their scoring, and after that they never saw the third sack but once and that was in the eighth when the game was called so that the boys could catch the train. The Pine City boys in the first inning got eight scores; in the second, one; in the third, four; in the fourth, three; but in the next three innings they never saw the second sack but once and that was in the fifth. The feature of the game was the long fly hit by Elmgren to left field which Ben Hurley misjudged and ran under, Elmgren making a home run out of what should have been an easy out, and which started the running in the fifth. If Ben had got the fly, Harris would have been shut out entirely. Harris had four pitchers in the box during the game but the locals had their batting clothes on and hit at will all but the last pitcher who they only found for one safe hit. Hoeller did the twirling for the locals, and considering the fact that he pitched the day before, did remarkably well, striking out seven of the Harris boys and giving but two bases on balls, while the Harris pitchers only struck out three of the locals and gave four free passes and hit one local. The score by innings was as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Innings and Score. 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 Harris - 0 0 0 5 0 0 0 - 5 Pine City - 8 1 4 3 0 0 0 x - 10

After the ball game the balloon arrived and the crowd stayed to watch the filling of the air ship, which took about an hour and a half, when at about six o'clock the aeronaut said "All let go," and was carried up in the air about four hundred feet, making a very pretty ascent. The balloon was carried in a northeasterly direction and came down in McAllen's pasture about half a mile from where it started. The fair closed with a dance given by the ball boys in Rath's hall in the evening. The fair taken as a whole was a grand success, considering the weather, as there would have been a much larger crowd had the weather been more favorable.

Another Young Man

Called Hence. Last Sunday morning at about 8:15 the sad news was circulated that Robert Lambert had passed away, another victim to that dreadful disease, consumption. Although everyone knew that Rob could not get better, yet it was a surprise to the family and to his many friends, as it had been reported around town that the doctors said he would live for a couple of weeks at least, so that when the end came it was a great surprise.

Robert Emmet Lambert was born in this place, October 28th, 1876, where he was raised and educated in the public schools. He left here about a year and a half ago and went to Princeton, Minn., where he met Miss Ethel Tibbets, to whom he was married September 22nd, 1900, being married just one year. He was taken sick with pneumonia last January and has been failing steadily ever since. Everything that medical skill could do was done for him and at times it was thought he was improving. About four weeks ago he came back from Sioux Falls, S. D., where he had been doctoring, the doctors there saying that his lung trouble was all gone, but those of his friends who saw him know that his days were numbered, but did not think that the end was so near. He kept gradually getting weaker and weaker and for the past three weeks he has been confined most of the time to his bed. Death came to his rest Sunday morning, September 22nd, 1901 at 8:15.

The funeral was held from St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning at 10:30, Rev. Father Beuchler officiating, with interment at Calvey Cemetery. The pall bearers were R. J. Harvey, David Payne, John Connor, P. H. O'Brien, William Horley and C. H. Gerdt. Robert Lambert was a young man that was respected by all who knew him, kind-hearted, honest and industrious, and in his death his wife has lost a kind and loving husband, his parents, brothers, and sisters a dutiful and loving brother, and his friends a genial companion. He leaves a young widow, father, mother, three brothers, two sisters, his nephews, numerous friends to mourn his loss. The Proben extends its condolences to the bereaved and its sympathies.

Gilman & Mattson, who have run a general store at this place for the past seven years, have sold out to the Rush City Mercantile Co., of Rush City, and they are running this store as a branch of their large department store at that city, and have recently built a large potato and hay warehouse and are buying any thing on a farm. Mr. Mattson is employed as manager for the branch store here, assisted by Wm. Greed, formerly of Rutledge, and Mr. Gilman is now traveling salesman for Winston, Harper, Fisher & Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., and covers this territory. It is needless to say that during the time Gilman & Mattson have conducted their business at this place, they have a large number of friends, and we will miss their daily appearance greatly. But there is one consolation in the fact that their future residence will not be further away than Rush City.

Several Democratic papers, and some of them in this state, are putting themselves in a hole from which they may some time find it difficult to extricate themselves. They are saying something like this: "O, yes; Roosevelt is all right and he is not owned by the corporations, but Mark Hanna will never allow him to be nominated." Suppose he were nominated, how long would it take these papers to get around into the Democratic chorus and declare that he was owned by the corporations. But the Democrats need not concern themselves about "Teddy." If the Republican masses want him they will have him, and there will be no W. C. Whitney there to buy the nomination as it was bought for Cleveland in 1892, and no silver trust to take the choice out of the people's hands as it was taken when Bryan was nominated in 1896.

Oats—Testing Varieties.

Nearly everyone knows that there is a great difference between varieties of grain in their power to yield well, but few realize how extensive is the possible variation, or how important it is to the farmer to secure the very best. The farmer works on a close margin. The cost of preparing, sowing and harvesting for an acre of grain will be nearly the same for a poor crop as a good one, and the same rule applies to varieties. The difference in yield between a good kind and a poor one is so much clear gain.

It is difficult for the farmer to determine for himself what is the best, for his choice will be limited to two or three kinds, obtained in various ways, and compared roughly in the field. The experience of neighbors is a good guide, and it is in this way that the better varieties, when once introduced, are spread.

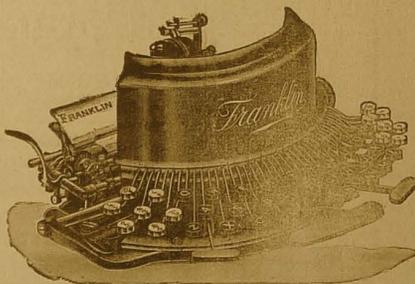

The Experiment farm has conducted a systematic trial of varieties of grain, since its establishment. As oats are regarded as the most important grain crop for this section at present, most attention has been paid them.

The varieties are grown in plots of equal size on soil selected for its evenness of character, and are kept carefully separated through the process of harvesting, threshing and cleaning. The comparative yields of these plots, when averaged for five or more years, to eliminate possible variations caused by soil or season, should furnish the most reliable information at present available, as to the merits of the varieties tested.

In a five years trial completed in 1910, in which 23 varieties of oats were tested, a kind known as "Improved Elgova," was found to have averaged 51 bushels more per acre for the entire period than any other. This variety was propagated for seed and the entire crop of 400 bu. will be available for seed next spring.

Another five years test was begun in 1901, including 31 varieties, of which all but 7 were new. These were all carefully selected from widely different sources, as having shown particular merit, and were grown on the very uniform soil. In spite of this, the lightest 54 bu. 2 difference of 20 bushels per acre in favor of the better variety. The average yield of these 31 kinds was 43 bu., leaving 11 bu. per acre margin, and as many kinds of oats are not so good as any of those, the difference would be apt to be still greater.

In view of these facts, it is evident that special efforts should be made to raise and keep a variety whose value has been demonstrated.
