WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, February 17th, 1902.

Ash-Wednesday brought to a close one of the gayest social seasons Washington has known in many years. Since that date comparatively small and informal entertainments have replaced the brilliant functions of the earlier season but today every one is on the qui vive anticipation of the historic performance which will present to an ultra-fashionable audience the flower of the capital's debutantes and dames in theatricals and tableaux. Fabulous prices have been paid for boxes and sittings and the long list of patronesses, which is headed by Mrs. Roosevelt's name and includes those of the leaders of society, insures a gratifying success.

The nature of the entertainment will be the presentation of "The Reward of Amarrilis," written by Mrs. Burton Harrison, with Miss Jennie Pearce of Boston in the leading role. Mrs. Harrison has come to Washington to direct the presentation. The proceeds will, of course, be devoted to charity.

Another notable event in the interest of charity and of equal social importance will be the lecture on the evening of February 20th, on "King Lear" by Dr. D. J. Stafford, the famous Shakespearean interpreter who sacrificed what would have been a brilliant histrionic career to enter the Roman Catholic priesthood. Mrs. Roosevelt's name also heads the list of patronesses for this event.

The news that the Italian Ambassador and Signora de Planches will soon occupy the handsome residence recently purchased from Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst, is greeted most cordially by society. The Hearst home is one of the most beautiful residences in the city and, as the Ambassador is fond of entertaining and is already a favorite, it is anticipated that his new home will prove another of those charming rendezvous for which Washington is famous.

To satisfy a very general curiosity as to the costume which will be worn by the American representatives at the coronation of Edward VII, I have ascertained at the State Dept. that it will consist of ordinary evening dress, except that knee-breeches and black silk stockings will be worn in lieu of trousers. This costume was agreed upon many years ago in a conference between the State Department and the British Foreign Office and has ever since been worn by American representatives when attending court. The Americans will be the only persons so attired, all others not in uniform being required to appear in court-dress with cocked-hat, sword, etc. The United States' naval and army officers will, of course, wear full uniform.

Since the passage by the House of Representatives of the majority anti-oleomargarine bill no legislation of importance has been undertaken by that body, but today the repeal of the war revenue taxes will be taken up. Much interest centers in the Ways and Means Committee which will take up the question of Cuban reciprocity today. I saw Chairman Payne this morning but could elicit from him only the fact that the Committee "would see what it could do without injury to American interests." There is no doubt that a majority of the Committee is opposed to granting any concessions on principle, but the pressure from the White House and from the Senate end of the Capitol is so strong that some measure will probably be reported.

The Philippines bill is still under consideration in the Senate and some time has been devoted to the permanent census bill. The former, and possibly the latter, will probably be disposed of this week.

The President is again at the White House and is completing his verdict in the Bentley case which will probably be made public soon.

A vigorous effort is being made in the House of Representatives to secure the passage of a bill providing for a department of Mines and Mining and Representative S. D. Woods of California, the author of the bill, is leaving no stone unturned to secure that end. The measure providing for the establishment of a Department of Commerce and Labor seems likely to pass the present session and makes Mr. Woods all the more certain that he can secure the passage of his bill. Speaking on the subject today he said: "There is every reason why the government should recognize the importance of this industry by establishing a department to represent it with a Cabinet officer at its head. The mining interests of the country produced wealth in 1890 to the amount of $978,800,000. Is that not reason enough in itself why there should be a department to represent these gigantic interests? Again, there are hundreds of thousands of men employed in the mines of the country. Their interests should be safeguarded as only a department of the government can guard them. We have a Department of Agriculture to watch over and protect the interests of the farmers, to investigate improved methods, to determine what are worthy of adoption and what are not, and so save the farmers themselves millions of dollars. This department further investigates foreign markets. Why should not the mining interests have all these helps and safeguards? They deserve them. They contribute millions to the wealth of the country and they deserve recognition and the greatest possible protection that the government can afford them. The acquisition of an immense area of new territory in the Philippines, Porto Rico, etc., all of it doubtless rich in mineral, is an added reason for the establishment of such a department."

Because of the apparently widely entertained opinion that the oleomargarine bill reported by the minority of the House Committee on Agriculture and championed by Representative Wadsworth, was inimical to the dairy interests, I called on the latter yesterday and requested him to explain the situation from his stand-point.

"My position," said Mr. Wadsworth, "is that the minority bill would have proved more efficacious in the prevention of the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine and that it was an infinitely more just, less inquisitorial and less pernicious form of legislation. The minority bill would have accomplished every purpose and would have been free from the legitimate criticisms which will be applied to the majority measure."

"I am a buttermaker myself" continued Mr. Wadsworth, "and part owner in two creameries and my constituents are largely dairymen but I have no fear of going before them on this issue and when they understand the provisions of the two bills I am confident that they will approve of my views on this matter."

The eighth grade civics class had a debate Tuesday afternoon on, is it unwise for a village with a population of one thousand or less to become incorporated? The incorporation was favored.

The Ancient history class completed the study of Greece and Rome Wednesday, and had an examination Thursday. They will now take up civics.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain and Miss Hennighan entertained the pupils of the High School department at Mr. Chamberlain's home Saturday evening. The evening was spent in playing games after which an elaborate lunch was served. They departed for their several homes, after having a very nice time, just before it became midnight.

BLASTS OF WINTER.

They Cause Great Inconvenience in Eastern States.

TRAFFIC OF ALL KINDS IS DELAYED.

New York City Visited by the Worst Blizzard Since 1888—Army of Street Cleaners at Work—Storms at Other Ports.

New York, Feb. 18.—New York city has been the brunt of the fiercest snowstorm that has struck this section of the country since the great blizzard of 1888. Beginning soon after midnight Sunday the storm increased rapidly until completely snowed under. The rising force of the gale piled the snow in great drifts that in the main thoroughfares, where the car tracks were only kept open by the constant use of snowplows and sweepers. Communication between Manhattan and Brooklyn was subject to long delay. The ferryboats with difficulty made trips across the ice-choked rivers, and the docks and wharves, lighters and shipping generally lay almost at a standstill. There was considerable delay in the arrival of mails. The trains on all the lines remaining in operation were hours behind time during the morning, but towards evening the schedules were more nearly normal.

Traffic Greatly Congested.

The congestion of traffic on the Manhattan street car lines was severe during the morning, when many of the avenues were blocked with long lines of stalled cars. On Broadway wheel traffic was confined to the narrow lanes between high snow hills and along these the cars were crowded at a snail's pace. From other thoroughfares truck traffic disappeared almost entirely. In the shopping districts the stores were completely closed at several of the great department stores closed at four o'clock. Four thousand men were set to work to clear the streets of Manhattan early in the afternoon. Of these half were engaged in opening cross walks, while 2,000 men and 300 trucks were employed to work all night clearing the main streets.

Through Brooklyn the blockade was even more general than in Manhattan, and little progress was made by the street cleaning department here until opening cross walks on the principal streets. Coney Island, Fort Hamilton and Coney Island were completely cut off from all communication over the Brighton Beach road, where half a dozen trains were hopelessly stalled at one time. The cars that did not over 60 per cent of the cars of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system were in operation, and thousands were compelled to make their way over the streets.

Worse Than in 1888.

The conditions that were in every respect worse than in the great blizzard of 1888. Telegraph and telephone service in New York experienced little interruption, but the snow was heavy, there was no sled to break the wires. During the day only a few minor accidents to pedestrians resulted from the storm.

Storm Was General.

New York, Feb. 18.—The eastern part of New York state from this city to the Canadian border was visited by a blizzard such as had not been experienced for 14 years. Up to midnight reports showed that 15 counties had received in excess of the effects of the storm and the accompanying fall of snow. These counties were Dutchess, Orange, Ulster, Albany, Schoharie, Schoenhardelegony, Saratoga, Essex, Columbia, Benessee, Washington, Clinton, Oneida, Onondaga and Chemung. This will be seen that the storm was a winter of counties caught the storm and that it did not extend to the western portion of the state, although expected to do so. The sameness about the reports from the upstate towns. Anywhere from four to eighteen inches of snow, blowing at a hurricane rate, drifts from six to in one instance, twenty-five feet deep are among the features, while there is iteration and repetition of delayed trains, impeded or wholly abandoned trolley service and impassable country roads. The latest reports indicate that the worst is over, for the wind is abating and in many places the snow has ceased falling.

At Other Points.

Philadelphia, Feb. 18.—The heavy snowstorm which began in this section at ten o'clock Sunday night ceased at the clock Monday morning. The fall of snow being the heaviest in three years. A high wind accompanied the storm. The greatest fall of snow occurred at Atlantic City, where the center of the storm Monday morning. The weather bureau there reports that 17 inches fell, and that in the vicinity of the wind was 35 miles. Cape May reported a snowfall of eight inches. In this city 11 inches of snow were reported at the new pier, and in the interior of Pennsylvania snow fell in depths varying from one to six inches. It was reported to be falling Monday night in the western mountainous sections of the state. The heavy rain continuing in this city was considerably increased, trains were greatly delayed, and in some instances stopped. The greatest difficulty was experienced within the city limits and in the lanes leading to New York and the seashore. Street car traffic in this city and the suburbs was almost entirely stopped today, and no attempt was made to keep schedule time. Some lines were blocked for hours, but with the ending of the storm traffic began to improve.

In New Jersey.

New York, Feb. 18.—Advice received from points in New Jersey show that the great blizzard which fell from Bergen county to Cape May and from Atlantic City to Camden. The latest advice are that the storm has abated considerably, the snow has ceased to fall and the wind having decreased in velocity. As was natural, the brunt of the gale, which approached the dimensions of a hurricane, was felt by the sea coast towns, but the interior cities and townships did not escape. Travel by road was almost impossible; cities and villages were cut off, and large gangs of street cleaners gave up the battle against the driving snow early in the day, the railroads were enabled to move trains by the free use of snow plows, and street car traffic all over the state was stopped at the sweeping machines and plows cleared the tracks about the middle of the afternoon. This applies to the large cities only, for in the smaller places the tracks are so badly covered with snow that they are not cleared for two days. There was a general suspension of the schools in the afternoon, while the morning sessions were cancelled, and the schools were closed. It was heard from notices were given that there would be no attempt to hold school today.

New England.

Boston, Feb. 18.—After an unprecedented stretch of clear weather drifting back to Camden day, New England was blanketed Monday with a foot of snow, which was followed by a north-easterly gale. This onslaught of the elements impeded traffic and carried down the telegraph and telephone wires, so that many important points were cut off. Fortunately there was not a large amount of shipping off the coast, and no marine disaster had been reported. New York, Feb. 18.—Eight inches of snow had fallen in this city up to six o'clock Monday evening, according to the measurement of the weather observatory. It was a heavy snow fall of the winter and, piled into drifts by wind of a velocity of 30 miles an hour, has greatly delayed traffic all over the city. The train service of the steam railroads has been impeded and many trolley lines have been blocked.

LOSS OF LIFE WAS APPALLING.

Further Advice from Shamka Show That 2,000 Persons Perished by Earthquake.

Baku, Transcaucasia, Feb. 18.—Deaths which are slowly arriving at the time of the earthquake, which took place on Feb. 17, were 2,000 persons, mostly women and children, perished as a result of the earthquake last week, and that 4,000 houses were destroyed. Thirty-four villages of the country surrounding Shamka also suffered. To add to the terrors of the neighborhood, a volcano in the village of Marasy, eastward of the Shamka, has broken out into active eruption. A great crevasse has appeared, whence numerous lanes and streams of lava are being thrown out. The course of the river Geomchaka has been altered, and the water has been dammed with earth which had been disturbed by the earthquake. Battalions of guards and detachments of troops have been dispatched to Shamka to aid in the work of rescue. The Red Cross society is active in alleviating distress.

He Will Testify.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 18.—Marlin T. Krueger, mayor of Michigan City, Ind., was in Lincoln Monday evening on his way to David City, where he testified in the case of the bank which was charged with wrecking the Platt Valley bank of Bellevue. Mr. Krueger, formerly a member of the legislature, was issued by the bank and sold to Michigan City investors. Many of his clients, he said, were widows and orphans of soldiers, and he testified that he was financially ruined by the trial of the bank. He testified that he was not a party to the trial of the bank.

Peet, treasurer of the American mission at Constantinople, met the brigands on the road to the Polrona monastery and paid them the money February 6. M. Gargiolo is waiting here, continues the correspondent, to be ignorant as to whether the American missionary, and her companion, Mme. Taika, are concealed.

DEBATE IS DROPPED.

House Passes War Tax Revision Bill with a Rush.

NOT A VOTE CAST IN OPPOSITION.

Democrats Cause a Session by Moving a Place Session on its Passage by Consent—Senate Ratifies the Danish Treaty.

Washington, Feb. 18.—The unexpected happened in the house Monday when the bill to repeal the war revenue taxes was passed unanimously without a word of debate. This action was the outcome of a challenge thrown down by Mr. Richardson (Tenn.), the minority leader, after the adoption by a strict party vote of the bill which permitted debate until four o'clock Tuesday afternoon, but cut off all opportunity for a general debate. The bill was agreed upon by the ways and means committee. The adoption of the rule had been preceded by a stormy debate, in the course of which the democrats protested against the application of the "gag" which Mr. Hay (Va.) charged was meant to prevent free expression, not only by the democrats, but by some of the republicans, attention being especially directed toward Mr. Babcock (Wis.), the father of the bill to amend the law. This onslaught of the elements impeded traffic and carried down the telegraph and telephone wires, so that many important points were cut off. Fortunately there was not a large amount of shipping off the coast, and no marine disaster had been reported.

PINE COUNTY PIONEER.

ED. C. GOTTRY, Editor and Prop.

Entered in the Post Office at Pine City as Second Class Matter.

PINE CITY, MINN., Feb. 21, 1902

We acknowledge the receipt of the Memorial Addresses on the Life and Character of the late Gustman K. Davis, delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives of the Fifty sixth Congress, Second Session, held January 12th, 1901. The volume is a government document and was sent to us by Hon. Moses Clapp, for which we are greatly indebted to him. We have not had the time to examine the work thoroughly but what we have read of it has convinced us that it is a book that every citizen of this great State of Minnesota should read, as it shows conclusively in the manner in which the senior Senator from this state was held by his colleagues in Congress, not only in the Senate but also in the lower branch of the House. Again we thank Senator Clapp for the volume.

The Gentlemen of the M. E. Church Entertain.

Wednesday evening at Hurley's hall the gentlemen of the M. E. church served an oyster supper and entertainment to quite a large crowd of our citizens. About ninety partook of the supper which was cooked and served by the gentlemen in a manner that would do credit to a first class hotel or restaurant. After the supper a literary entertainment consisting of selections by the Zobo band, comb quartette, speaking, vocal and instrumental music was rendered by the gentlemen. The entertainment lasted for about two hours and during the whole of that time the gentlemen kept their audience spell bound or convulsed with laughter. Taking the entertainment as a whole it was very good and will add a neat little sum to the church treasury.

BEYOND THE SHADOW.

We mortals live within a little space of night. And if we seek to look beyond it, all is black. And as we walk upon our earth, way, a shadow hides the sun, this very day. To us the most momentous what it may not prove.

And all around us when we love—We cannot tell. A thick veil hides all future times, and dimly but our knowledge things both and bright. That, yet we sit, would draw aside, and read.

But there, paths shrouded by our worship blind. That had our Father in His love devised. What would so often fill with tears our eyes. "We but knew.

What things the shadow has contained before we know. We see the days of years, in memory's light aglow. Things which well nigh impossible we deemed. Others we scarce had hoped for, scarce had dreamed. Came to us simply, sudden, unawares. These things have been, and also petty cares and joys.

Another shadow, dark across our path we feel and see. That of the river, we must cross at last. "O God, to Thee. What shall our hearts be, there across the river? Eternal peace, from the Almighty Giver. Joy beyond every joy of worldly birth. Joy in the promised Heaven, and new earth eternally."

CREATING AN ATMOSPHERE

BY F. H. LANCASTER.

The pines were tossing their heads in a tempest of exultant strength; a wild wind had come out of the northwest for a romp. The woman watching them with hungry eyes, unfolded her arms and turned away reluctantly. It was close and smelly inside, and there were people there who expected her to be pleasant, when she could not. With all the yearning of a genius she longed to be alone; to live but a little longer in this atmosphere of serene strength.

"If I were an older hand at the business I could keep my atmosphere—as the pines keep theirs. She lingered to let her pulses thrill once more to the resistless strength of those strong, straight stems, and then, folding her arms upon a stern serenity of mood, opened the door and stumbled into the darkened parlor.

It was close after the windy outside, as she had expected. "Never mind lights and odors, if you can only keep your atmosphere," she told herself, as she realized with a thrill of unconsciousness that there was but one other person in the room.

"Blinding, after the play of light outside," he remarked, cheerfully sympathetic, as he came forward to shake her hands. Hannah sat aside the pleasurable sensation and greeted him serenely. "There is quite a wind among the pines," she explained.

"Yes; I noticed it as I walked up. Grand sight. Did you ever notice how it soothes one, the constant roar and senseless dashing?" "Like a storm at sea. There are certain moods when nothing soothes like a display of reckless unrest—she paused abruptly.

"Morris moved restlessly. He was not getting on very well, and he was painfully conscious of the fact. She was usually frank and free with her opinion.

"Why, does this roof leak?" He smiled at her disconcerted expression. She was beginning to be herself once more, and his spirits rose with a rush. "Do you want to get back to your work so badly as all that?" He took a restless turn through the room and passed beside her. "If you will promise to do something for me I will go home and let you work in peace."

He gazed quietly at the motionless forest, but his voice deepened. "Hannah's atmosphere suffered a swift change of currents. "I don't know," he muttered. "But you will try," he insisted. "See, there is the rain."

They stood silent for a moment watching its approach. At first faint white streaks stealing up the forest stairs, then an opaque white mist, then the distant trunks, leaving the pine tops blurred and misty. The breath of the air grew wet and fragrant, the forest trunks lost all distinctness of outline and a few large drops of rain splashed against the window sill.

"Well," Hannah sighed, "that is the last of my atmosphere." Morris laid an eager hand on her arm. "Let me help you to another one. Here, in this window seat, we could create a deliciously cozy atmosphere with the rain outside, and—will you admit that I seem to have won you after our afternoon? He has been my constant companion for so long now that I doubt whether I could shut him out. He is not had company. I assure you he has turned many a thunder cloud into a rose-colored mist for me. May he come here, and I will be glad to share Hannah's made-to-be drawn down into the broad-cushioned seat and—the deliciously cozy atmosphere was created.

is or not," he returned, gloomily. "I have a dashed feeling as though I were a puppet in another man's show."

"Not a very pleasant sensation." "Not exactly. Makes me feel like sympathizing with that poor devil, Cyrano, after he has been wooing his sweetheart in Christian's name."

"That's a pretty sense—that halcyon scene in Cyrano de Bergerac. If Hannah consented, beginning to glory a little in the grip she was keeping on her atmosphere."

"We might be happy." "At any rate, it is true what he says about it being a sin in love to play at feeling, and all around us when we love—We cannot tell."

"To fence in love?" "Yes. Why, where would we be if it was a matter of straight cut and thrust, and no felicitas?" "We might be happy."

"We would most probably be bankrupt. The sum and substance of a love story is the feeling."

"Love stories do not love story. Yes, I dare say it's eminently necessary. Does it never strike you as a cold-blooded man to say that the most sacred sensations of the human heart?"

"To tell the truth, the adjectives torment me so that I haven't time to think of nouns. I know what mine generally are by the time I get the thing in hand."

"Yes; profane." "Well, in no sense," she admitted. "Not exactly wishing you would hire a secretary, but—tell me how do you writers go to work on a story?"

"Oh, I don't know. Of course, we first create an atmosphere."

"Why, it means. It means that you have to satisfy your mind with the matter you are going to work on and get yourself into the mood you are going to exploit. If you want to depict a vicious character, you've got to be vicious at the time you write."

"For the time being, I begin to see. Go on."

"That is there is nothing to go on. That all there is to it."

"Morris twisted his mustache thoughtfully. Hannah moved her seat so that she might watch the wind-tossed pines. Really if he expected to reach home before the storm broke he ought to get on, she thought.

"But I must say that's pretty good shooting for one day," said Perkins, abashed Judge.

"'Twas pretty fair, but I should have got more yet if my shells hadn't gin out."

"That's so," said the constable. "Twas hard on the old goose, when I went down to the madders gunnin' with that old muzzle-loader or mine. I fished round 'em all day, and I had one charge of powder left. Birds had come 'em long one in a flock, and 'em and then ten lone ones, and all of 'em out of range, and I had no more. I was kinder discouraged."

"I hadn't had a good shot all day. But just as I was gittin' out of the stand I heard a 'caw, caw, caw, hollerin', and I had a good shot all day. But just as I was gittin' out of the stand I heard a 'caw, caw, caw, hollerin', and I had a good shot all day. "With just that's pretty good shooting for one day," said Perkins, abashed Judge.

OLIVE SLOP FOR THE PIGS.

Experiments Demonstrate That There is But Small Gain in Mixing Grains with Water.

The Indiana station has reported some data on a question which often arises in pig feeding—namely, what is the advantage of mixing the grain feed with water and how thick or how thin should the slop be fed?

Four pigs each were used in a test which covered about five months. For about three months all the pigs were fed meal and shorts. During the remainder of the time hominy feed replaced the corn. Lot 1 was given the dry grain, Lot 2 was fed dry grain mixed with an equal weight of water; while in the case of Lot 3 it was mixed with twice and in the case of Lot 4 three times its weight in water. In addition to the dry grain or slop the pigs were supplied with all the drinking water they desired, and the amount consumed was recorded.

The average daily gains of the four lots were in every case a little over one pound. The gain required per pound of gain from the four lots were 3.59, 3.80, 3.74 and 3.75 pounds respectively. The cost of food per pound of gain ranged from 2.75 cents in the case of Lot 1 to 3.04 cents in the case of Lot 2. In view of the fact that the pigs fed dry grain made slightly better gains than those fed grain mixed with water in the form of slop, it would appear that there is really no gain in feeding the pigs a slop instead of dry grain, excepting as a feeder may regard it a matter of convenience.

HANDY STABLE GRANNARY.

It is Not Only Useful as a Larder, Vase, But Also Keeps the Grain in Fine Condition.

My grain bins have a raised bottom, as portrayed, elevated at back and side, so the grain will slide to outlet spouts, a, a, which have a sliding gate, b, to raise or lower it as wanted. The spouts should be high enough from floor for a one-half bushel measure to set under, or where large quantities of grain are wanted, for bags, bins are filled from top at door, which has a tight fitting lid. Grain elevated on a platform in the middle from wagon. Every time any grain is taken out, the grain in bin is stirred around, thereby drying out damp grain.—W. A. Sharp, in Farm and Home.

THE SHEEP'S FEET.

If They Are Properly and Systematically Cared For, Lameness Will Occur Rarely.

It seems hard to understand why it never occurs to many shepherds to trim the feet of the home flock. But more than that, some even enter the show ring with the two divisions of the foot curled and the outer one usually turned up as if it were searching for a support on which to climb. Such a sheep can hardly walk, and when let loose in the show ring, waddles around as if it were seeking for a support on which to climb. During the summer, especially if pastured on lilly and gravelly ground, the feet may not need attention, but before the flock goes into winter quarters, and again at shearing time the feet want looking after, says the Homestead.

Usually looking after, says the Homestead. Usually after trimming at shearing time is sufficient, but the flockmaster, by watching, should know how often, and when he should attend to the feet of his own flock. Varieties differ a great deal; usually the fine woolled sorts grow horn much more rapidly than the coarser sorts, and the top growing inordinately begins to turn upward. After a time the sheep goes lame because of the fifth and irritation, and when this is the most suitable conditions for foot rot to develop.

In paring the feet the toe should be cut off at a point where the natural toe seems to stop. The toes are seldom shortened too much. Of course if cut too closely some bleeding may result, and while this is not serious, it is needless pain to the sheep. In removing the double sides pare these close to the natural pad of the foot and clean out with a stick or scummin. If it is filled with matter or suppurated, clean it out thoroughly and dress it with a saturated solution of copper sulphate or blue stone. If chalk or some other harmless substance is mixed with this it gives it better results, and while this is not serious, it is needless pain to the sheep.
