WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 31st 1902.

No important legislation was accomplished last week in the Senate. The first four days were devoted to the discussion of the anti-oligonarchic bill and on Thursday adjournment was taken until this morning. This does not mean, however, that the senators were idle, for a large amount of important committee work has been disposed of. Senator Lodge has practically completed the Philippine Civil bill and it will be reported to the Senate at an early date. The minority have outlined their views in what may be presented as a minority report or may be used merely as a basis on which to contest the passage of the measure on the floor of the Senate. Senator Proctor's committee has considered the advisability of presenting a distinct bill providing a tax on renovated or "process" butter and of amending the oleomargarine bill to the same effect. Senator Harris of Kansas, is the instigator of this movement. Senator Allison has been doing a large amount of work on the appropriation committee, there now being four appropriation bills which have been passed by the House but which have not yet been considered by the Senate. On Thursday, Senator Patterson of Colorado brought up the subject of General Funston's capture of Aguinaldo and read in support of the contention that the capture was not in accordance with the principles of civilized warfare, the major portion of a magazine article written by the General himself.

The House of Representatives passed the Army Appropriation bill with but one important amendment. That provides that the Secretary of war may call into active service those officers who have been retired for disability and have later recovered from such disability. The amendment is aimed at certain officers who have been retired and have later so far recovered as to be able to earn competencies outside of the service. On Friday the House devoted itself to the pension bills of which there were a great number on the calendar. Saturday was devoted to the consideration of a bill making various changes in the Revenue Cutter Service and to the consideration of the Sundry Civil bill, will begin. This bill provides for a number of military and other parks, a large number of public buildings, etc.

On Thursday, Representative Richardson, the democratic leader, started the House by the introduction of resolutions calling for the investigation of certain charges of bribery in connection with the ratification of the treaty effecting the sale of the Danish West Indies. These charges were made in an alleged report of one Captain Christmas, a quasi-agent of the Danish government. Speaker Henderson appointed a committee consisting of four republicans and three democrats to make the investigation. On Friday the full text of the alleged report appeared in the Congressional Record and a careful reading conveys the idea that Captain Christmas, with a view to securing his reinstatement in the Danish army from which he had been discharged, came to this country to promote the transfer of the islands. He came with the conviction that political methods in this country were particularly corrupt and accordingly sought corrupt methods of effecting his ends. He appears to have come in contact with certain members of the "Third House," as the lobbyists are called, and they, leading him to believe that they could exert great influence with members of Congress, induced him to entreat them lavishly. His methods becoming known to his government, which had never officially authorized him to negotiate with the United States, he was promptly discredited and he is now seeking to recover the funds he foolishly expended. The only serious aspect of the situation seems to be that Secretary Hay received this man and at his suggestion permitted a representative of this government to accompany him to Copenhagen, where our representative immediately opened negotiations with the proper officials. The fact that Christmas introduced a representative of this government to the Danish Minister of Foreign Affairs seems to be the only valid grounds on which he can base any claim of having participated in the negotiations. If Secretary Hay was aware of the existence of Captain Christmas' report he may be open to some criticism for not having called the attention of the Senate to the matter before the ratification of the treaty. The members of both houses of Congress seem to be glad that the matter has been officially called to their attention as they believe that the investigation will serve to remove any shadow which the undisciplined report might have cast on Congressional action.

General Dick of Ohio has made his report on the new militia law in the House. Speaking on the subject the General told me recently that his bill had the approval of the President and the Secretary of war. "The bill provides," said the General, "that practically all able-bodied citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 shall be liable for military duty. The militia is organized into three classes, the organized militia, the national volunteer reserve and the reserve militia. The present national guard will be organized and equipped like the regular army and will be subject to the call of the President for a period not to exceed nine months. When so called they will receive the same pay and allowances as the regular troops and will be subject to the same discipline. The equipment of this branch shall be at the expense of the national government. The payment of funds to the different states and territories, which has heretofore been available only for equipment, will hereafter be available for any legitimate expense, but the militia must have fulfilled certain conditions in regard to drill, marches, encampments, etc.

"An important feature of the bill provides that officers of the militia, who shall have been nominated by the governors and appointed by the President, shall be entitled to a course at a military school or college, shall receive the same travel allowances and quarters as an officer of the regular army and subsistence at the rate of $1.00 per day. Militiamen in the service of the national government will come under the same provisions in regard to pensions as the regular troops.

"Another provision of the bill authorizes the Secretary of War to enroll not to exceed 100,000 men, who shall have served in the national guard, who shall constitute a volunteer reserve, each enrollment to cover a period of five years. This reserve shall be next called into service after the national guard."

DEFECTIVE DINING TABLES.

They Give a Man No Chance to Cross His Legs—Complaint of an Epileptic.

"I have discovered a very great defect in the architecture of the dining-table," remarked an epileptic the other day to a New Orleans Times-Democrat. "I have found in my time but very few tables built after my ideal, and it seems to me that some man ought to start a revolution along these lines. When I sit down to a meal I want to rest. Eating and resting ought to go together. Restfulness at meal time, absolute comfort at the table and good food of the wholesome kind are things that will commend themselves to most men.

"Now, I have what I may call a mealtime hobby. I always want to cross my legs under the table. Most men do, I believe. And why not? It is a comfortable position. It enables one to sit more erect, too. I do not know what claims are made about one's legs and feet during meal time, but I suppose it goes no further than to suggest that they should be kept under the table, which is correct, I mean. But I insist that among my inalienable rights is the right to cross my legs, and to cross them under the mahogany at that if it pleases me to do so and adds to my comfort.

"And yet it is a fact that one rarely enjoys this gracious privilege because of the awkward, grotesque and unhappy architecture of the dining table. The tables ought to be differently made. They ought to be roomier, so that a fellow would have ample space in which to cross his legs if it pleased him to do so. Of course, if one does not want to cross one's legs at meal times one need not do it, so the change could do no harm.

REFURNISHING WINDSOR.

The Old Furniture in the Castle Will Be Burned to Prevent Its Circulation.

His majesty intends to clear out a good deal of the old furniture and fittings at Windsor castle and replace them with his own. Having this in view, all residents have been on the lookout for signs of a bonfire somewhere in the precincts of the castle. In past times, when any chairs and tables and other articles therein were condemned, it was the practice to have them burned, says Modern Society.

The object of this was to prevent pieces of furniture stamped with the queen's monograms from being let loose, as it were, and so allowed to drift into the hands of brokers, and thence into the possession of persons having no right to them, but willing to pay almost any price to be able to display such royal articles in their own houses. It was a wasteful expenditure, but one can understand the need of such a precaution. There have been so many instances of royal gifts and discarded articles being found in shops and stores that some means of prevention are quite necessary. But up to the present time there have been no indications of a holocaust.

YOUR BODY NOT YOUR OWN.

If You Are So Disposed You Cannot Requite Your Corpse to the Doctors.

The supreme court of California has decided in a contest between next of kin on the one hand and claimants under a will on the other for the possession of a corpse, that a man cannot by will dispose of that which after his death will be his corpse, says the Chicago Chronicle. The custody of the corpse belongs to the next of kin in preference to the administrator. This view is based on the fact that the general English and American legal authorities establish the rule that, in the absence of statutory provisions, there is no property in a dead body. If this rule is correct, the sooner statutory provisions are obtained enabling a man who feels that a great benefit to humanity will accrue through increase of medical knowledge, by the continuance post mortem of an investigation into his case, or that new light may be shed upon other scientific problems, to authorize by will such use of his corpse, the better.

A Fisherman's Luck.

The prize of $25,000 in a 25-year lottery has been won by an old fisherman who is over 60 years of age, and has not missed a day from fishing for over 50 years. He can neither read nor write, and allowed his little son to choose the number of the ticket for him.

Schwab Kisses Kissing Them.

"There is a great deal of truth in the story that I kissed 200 women at the reception in the First Presbyterian church," said Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, the other day. "The story is too silly to contradict." The kissing extended to one baby and Mrs. Schwab. When someone suggested that he also kiss the mother of the baby Mr. Schwab laughingly replied that he kissed but one woman. Everybody in the church looked at Mrs. Schwab, who was standing alongside of him, and he promptly kissed her.

Unfashionable.

Since it has been discovered that the dog also has appendicitis, says the St. Louis Star, probably we shall not hear so much of it in the human family.
