REAL FLYERS; AND NO FAKES

Wright Brothers' Aero-plane To Be Seen At The State Fair. (1)

Courtesy due the managers and promoters of the aviation meet recently held on the State Fair grounds has caused the fair managers to say but little concerning the aeroplane flights that are to be a feature of the State Fair program.

Now that the aviation meet is past, attention is called to this attraction as arranged for the coming fair.

Consistent with the State Fair policies of giving the best in exhibits and attractions, it was decided that the aerial exhibitions should be furnished by the best that money could secure. Early in March an appointment was made with Mr. Roy Knabenshue, general manager of the public exhibition department for the celebrated Wright Brothers, and a meeting was held in Chicago. A contract at an enormous figure was made for an exhibit of one of the famous brothers' machines at the State Fair.

At that time the Wright Brothers, who had broken many records and who had made many demonstrations in Europe, had given but one public exhibition in America, this one being the one up and down the Hudson river at the time of the Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York.

When Mr. Knabenshue was asked what would constitute a flight, he said "anything you may desire, from thirty minutes to one hour." When asked how wind would interfere with the flights, he said "Don't worry about that."

The second week in June the Wright Brothers gave their first public demonstration at Indianapolis, Ind. With a 22 mile wind blowing, Mr. Brookings, a graduate from the class Mr. Orville Wright had been teaching for several weeks in the vicinity of Montgomery, Ala., broke the world's record for height, reaching an altitude in excess of 4,300 feet.

This is the kind of aerial exhibitions that will be seen at the State Fair. A competent operator and an engine of sufficient horse power to make long, high and sensational flights is what the Wright Brothers will furnish.

Mrs. Chas. Heineman who has been very ill with inflammatory rheumatism for some time, is somewhat better.

A party of our young people have been down to the St. Croix fishing for pears, but we haven't heard of any one hundred dollar pearls as yet.

As we went to Rock Creek Monday we passed five men with teams on their way to the Valley to make hay. There is plenty of it here.

A gentleman by the name of Drenham from Gettysburg, N. D., arrived Friday to see S. Gillig. He contracted for 320 acres of land here.

Mrs. Hendrickson and child went to Rock Creek Saturday to visit and attend an Adventist meeting. She was brought home by Chas. Heineman who is her neighbor.

Stephen Gillig and William Olsen are making hay on the Kipp farm near the Monroe Shoe place. Steve says that Bill can cut more hay than any man he ever saw swing a scythe. He has to watch him all the time in order to save his legs!

PINE CITY AND MORA SUNDAY

Pine City Played Ball At Mora and Was Defeated. Score 9 To 6. (1)

The boys from this place drove over to Mora last Sunday morning, arriving about noon, to play a game with the team at that place.

The game was called at 2:30. Mr. Buckley was on the mound for the locals for the first three innings and held the Mora team to a blank in every inning. In the fourth he let up a little and the Mora boys pushed in two scores. In the fifth they got one and in the sixth the local team went to pieces. Mora crossed the home plate five times in the seventh. The local boys pulled themselves together and another goose egg was added to the Mora frame. In the eighth Mora added one score, making nine in all.

Herbert Handshu was on the slab for the Mora team and pitched a good steady game. In the first the locals ran in three scores, but in the next three they were shut out. They got four in the fifth, the last during the game.

For the first five rounds it was a red hot game, the local team having a shade the best of the mill.

Next Sunday the same teams will cross bats on the local diamond and a good game can be seen, as Pine City has sworn a terrible vengeance.

A Wedding Feast

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Peter Winslow, actor and gentleman, tapped rather hesitantly upon the door of his next neighbor, Natalie Peyton. For three months he had been harbored in Mrs. Jones' severely puritanical home, and now he was in the hallway front, Winslow in the larger chamber adjoining. Since their first meeting he had given the girl a respectful salutation at each encounter. She had answered with a nod, a smile and murmured word; nothing more. But somehow it had been the brighter for them. It had been the brighter for him, because he had ventured to lay a magazine at her door; once, also, she had saved up dimes, an untiring and annoying rent for him. He had got it carelessly just as he was starting out, and already late so the kindness had been as real as it was trivial.

He had meant to return it if the situation had not changed. He had found out that Miss Peyton was at work every day—their encounters had been as she came in from the shop, and he went out to dine before the theater. The shop was a well-known place on the avenue—Peter did not know it—where fine made-up wigs were set at all prices according to prices, so when the slack season came and there was work only for the regulars, Natalie, new to the city last autumn, found herself idle, with no friends, fair prospect and a walkabout.

Winslow had somehow sensed the situation—helped, perhaps, by hearing her move about her room in daylight. Her face, too, had a subtle, terrified look, though she held herself straighter than ever, and smiled as brightly at him. "She's game," he said, "she's game, she's game as she's game." He was himself under a sunburst bright Sunday afternoon. "Hang on! If I don't chuck the Blenton crush and take her for a walk—and to dinner afterward."

Youth loves company the same as misery. Natalie, young and misershe went without dinner, though she had been bred to the strictest social observances. Neither did she talk of the mystery of dinner.

"It's a risk—I am truly frightened hungry," she said, "but I must have a smoke, that is plausibly brave."

It was memory of the smile that emboldened him, as they sat over their coffee in a quiet place, yet still far from cheap, to say lightly touching her free hand: "Why don't you go to him all that? In the least belong?"

"How do you know I could get out of it?" Natalie purred.

Winslow smiled softly and flicked the ash from his cigar. "Friends," he said, "she is not afraid to go away from adoring parents—only from a stepmom, and—well, Aunt Mary and John."

"I see," Winslow interrupted, "now, tell me all about him."

"Tell what? There's nothing to tell—if there were—Natalie cried, stopping short with a vivid blush that made Winslow smile again and shake his head."

"You'll never in the world make an actress out of her," he said. "Those eyes of yours can tell only the truth. John is hasty—foolishly hasty. He wants to marry you out of hand. When you want to find the great adventure!"

"How do you know?" Natalie again demanded.

Winslow looked straight into her eyes, his own twinkling. "I have been young—now I am—aging, if not old," he said. "With time, I have not forgotten the dependence of—to tell the truth—cases is, it is only folly, or some big hulking fellow six feet high—a regular football hero!"

"Well, I suppose," Winslow rather dryly said, sitting back to place

Winslow's face darkened. "You know about the Minotaur—the fabled monster that devoured yearly virgins in thousands?" he asked abruptly, then waiting for no reply he ran on: "The most of life is in the body only, we mortals refuse to understand. That's why the flesh mount up almost to millions, and some heartsaches for every one of the victims, involuntary victims mostly—there's the real pity of it. How much money is there tonight between you and starvation?"

Winslow smiled grimly. "I could guess," he said. "Severe respectability is costly—and you have laid up—let me see—possibly two dollars weekly."

"I have—or no I have, I shall not need anybody's charity," Natalie cried, rising. Her head very high, her eyes shining with tears.

Winslow also rose. "No; you would starve as becomes a gentleman," he said. "But you shall not—I will see to that—whether or not you like it. I'm your fairy godmother."

The man was tall, thin, Winslow torn by conflicting impulses. He was indeed aging—he had next to no money, but dim prospects in a most uncertain profession. The same delicate tastes that so hampered Natalie were also among his inheritance. He had seen little of his mother, whom he had despised, but he knew many ways—especially over things that other men held good business. The girl beside him deserved infinitely more of Pate than he could promise any woman. He must dragon her, if needed be, back to the shelter and comfort of this half-confessed John, and pray that she might live happy ever after.

At—at her door, he kissed her lightly upon the cheek, rushing away without a word. He hardly slept that night, but dawn brought heavy slumber; a light tap roused him from it around 11 o'clock, and Natalie's voice: "Hang on! If I don't chuck the Blenton crush and take her for a walk—and to dinner afterward."

Youth loves company the same as misery. Natalie, young and miserable, had somehow sensed the situation—helped, perhaps, by hearing her move about her room in daylight. Her face, too, had a subtle, terrified look, though she held herself straighter than ever, and smiled as brightly at him. "She's game," he said, "she's game, she's game as she's game."

Winslow was a man of few words, but he had a way with words.

"Come in! Quick! I want to show you something."

Half an hour later he stood staring open-eyed at cake, rich and sweet and light, as another food had an inch thick, in generous slices, in wedges, in half-loaves. Tarts likewise, and small fancifully ornamented cakes. Natalie beamed above the array, flourishing in her right hand, bidding cards.

"Natalie," she explained succinctly, "I'm so glad. The best hotel in the world—but nothing else. If he had had a thumbtiful personality, I could never have said 'No.' All of them were so anxious to have us marry each other, I thought—such knowledge he cannot appreciate the value of fruit spurs and limbs that show a tendency to early fruiting."

Until an orchard is ten to fourteen years of age it is seldom necessary to thin out the small fruit limbs and fruit spurs, but after the bearing habit is

PROPER METHOD OF PRUNING

To Get Best and Quickest Results Apple Tree Should Be Seven Years Old Before Cut.

The common method of pruning apple trees is to thin out the top and center of the tree to let in the sun—shading the side branches. The remaining limbs and fruit spurs are scarcely cut out of the center until the limbs left to form the tree have for the first three or four feet a clean, bare, hoop-pole appearance, with no bearing wood in the center of the tree writes J. C. Beaton, in Farmington Hills.

To get the best and quickest results an apple tree should have no pruning until five to seven years old, except taking out sprouts and cutting back the long limbs to induce a short stocky growth. At about the age of five or seven years a thorough, systematic pruning should be given, cutting out only twigs that are worthless—an inch and up in diameter.

The decision is in the case of Ole B. Nelson, who represented the Seven Corners Milk Company, the Northeast Milk Company, the Northern Milk Products Milk Company, the Bloomington Creamery Company and the Spring City Creamery Company. The case was brought by Nelson to determine whether an ordinance requiring herds supplying milk to the city creameries should be required to undergo the tuberculosis test. At the trial in March an order was made declaring the ordinance valid, and an appeal was taken by Nelson to the supreme court.

Cities Given Unlimited Power to Regulate Their Milk Supply in the Interest of Public Health.

ST. PAUL. — The Minnesota State supreme court has handed down a decision confirming the right of cities to demand pure milk.

The decision is in the case of Ole B. Nelson, who represented the Seven Corners Milk Company, the Northeast Milk Company, the Northern Milk Products Milk Company, the Bloomington Creamery Company and the Spring City Creamery Company. The case was brought by Nelson to determine whether an ordinance requiring herds supplying milk to the city creameries should be required to undergo the tuberculosis test. At the trial in March an order was made declaring the ordinance valid, and an appeal was taken by Nelson to the supreme court.

Cities Given Vast Power.

The decision of the court was sweeping, declaring, in effect, that a city possesses power to adopt any measure deemed expedient to safeguard its milk supply. The text of the opinion follows:

"An ordinance of the city of Minneapolis prescribing as a test of purity and wholesomeness of milk brought into the city for sale, that drawn from cows previously subjected to the tuberculosis test, and that which has been held not in conflict with the statutes of the state, and a valid police regulation. Following State vs. Nelson, 65 Minn., 165.

"The methods to be adopted in insuring the safety of pure milk, and the standard by which the same shall be determined, is a legislative, and not a judicial question.

"An ordinance authorizing the summary seizure and destruction of milk not conforming to the standard fixed by the city is violative of the constitutional rights of the citizen, nor a taking of property without due process of law.

MURDER AT WALKER.

Man Kills Another, Takes to the Woods, Found by Posse.

Walker. — Edward Lucia, a stem-borer on the beach where he lived and killed James Boardwell, engineer at the Leech Lake Lumber company's new saw mill, with a 32 rifle, the shot taking effect in Boardwell's forehead, death being instantaneous.

Lucia's claim was that Boardwell and his stepson, Earl Hoover, were making a white slave out of his 16-year-old daughter.

Arriving at the tent where Boardwell and the boy were together with Mr. Boardwell Lucia opened the door, firing two shots and then took to the woods back of the premises.

The village was at once aroused and men with guns at once came to the scene. Lucia was captured and a search of the woods for Lucia who was found after half an hour by Robert Block, of St. Paul.

The shooting was evidently premeditated, as Lucia went to the place with a gun and was heard to shout that he was going to shoot both the man and the stepson.

Lucia's daughter had been staying at the Boardwell home for some time and his father had his word with Lucia that he would stop staying there.

Always have materials for Bordeaux mixture at hand so that they may be used on any spare day.

Blackberry bushes should be cut back as soon as the crop is off. Do not let too many new canes grow.

It does not pay to plant crops in the presence of insects. Some people do it, but believe it is a bad practice.

Apple pickers should remember that the least puncture to the skin of an apple results sooner or later in a rotten spot.

Plant evergreen trees and shrubs in time so that they can be set out the latter part of August or early in September.

Carnations intended for winter blooming should not be allowed to flower. Pinch off the buds as soon as they appear.

Frogs exposed to the direct rays of the sun on a hillside should be protected or they are likely to be injured by sun-scald.

If the leaves of your apple and peach trees show dark green and the ground appears yellowish, you may know that tan soil is all right.

The bruise on an apple may not at once develop into rot, but it will make a brown spot, which disfigures and lessens the value of the fruit.

The Oregon live-oak station has observed that the shoots on the prunings which is more or less troublesome to them is caused by the weather and not by fungus growth.

If you observe that the shoots on your trees grow only five or six inches a year you may know that the old needs to be enriched. The growth ought to be from fifteen to thirty inches every season.

First District Progressives Decide on Laneshore Man.

Rochester—Sidney A. Anderson, a young lawyer of Laneshore, Fillmore county, will be the man to make the race for the Republican nomination for congressman of the First District. Senator George A. Tawney.

This is the result of the meeting of the executive committee of the First District Progressive League that met in conference upon the call of the chairman, Mr. Fraser. Seven counties in the First district were represented, about twenty-five being present.

Various plans for conducting a hot campaign that would carry with it the principles of the progressive element of the Republican party were discussed. It was voted unanimously to ask Mr. Anderson to be the candidate. Mr. Anderson finally gave his consent. Mr. Anderson addressed the meeting, and stated that he would not conduct a campaign on personal lines but along the lines of the progressive principles of the party. His address was well received, and all present at the meeting voted the opinion that they had found the Moses they have long been seeking.

A committee was appointed on resolutions and another one to draft a platform for the campaign. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and harmonious throughout, the one object being to get a suitable candidate and pave the way for a clean campaign.

Among those present were: Senator A. H. Rovrud and O. N. Levang, of Laneshore; A. C. Aby, of Rock Dell; E. G. Johnson, of Winona; and E. K. Whiting, of Owatonna, Editor Noticing of the Kasson Republican; H. C. Stivers, of Dodge Center; William Richardson, Thomas Fraser, W. Fraser, Dr. F. R. Ross, of Rochester.

A Trip to PAULO AFFONSO FALLS in Brazil

BY H. W. FURNISS

FEW tourists ever have more than a glance of a very small section of Brazil, as they travel by large steamers which only touch at the more important coast cities and they accept, without question, the volunteered advice of real-duty fellow-countrymen who have never traveled in the interior of the country. These speak as if from personal knowledge, though in reality false, of the difficulties, if not danger, to such travel.

Though there is individuality in all cities, more striking in some than in others, yet after all, as a result of civilization, there is so marked a similarity that one soon tires of most foreign cities. This monotony seldom extends to travel in the interior of a country, at least not in Brazil, which is filled with an enchanting scenery, remarkable plants, flowers and animals, and marvelous works of nature, giving to the traveler a new sensation at every turn. Such is the effect of a trip to the Falls of Paulo Affonso.

To reach Paulo Affonso falls it is necessary to take a coastwise vessel from Pernambuco or Bahia to Penedo, about 30 miles up the wonderful San Francisco river, which is navigable for a short distance on both sides of the falls, for over 1,000 miles into Brazil, and is full of interest from mouth to source.

Penedo is the second largest city in the state of Alagoas. Almost opposite Penedo is an ancient town of Villa Nova in the state of Sergipe. The town is said to have once been an important place, but now chiefly consists of tumble-down houses. A large rice-hulling factory is, however, located here, also large cotton-seed and castor-oil factories and a cotton gin. The products of these factories are shipped to near-by towns.

From Penedo to Piranhas, the head of navigation of the lower San Francisco, or that part of the river below the falls district, one has choice of making the trip either by small coast-dragging boats or by a steamer, which makes a round trip once a week, or by a locally built native sailboat called "canoas."

Canoas is Portuguese (the language of Brazil) for canoe, which it resembles in outline, but differs therefrom in having in the forward part a peculiarly shaped palm-leathered shield with dove-cote-like windows and a dark color, contrasting with the other woodwork. Other than a shield-like affair running around on a level with the windows and used either as seat or bulk, as occasion warrants, the cabin has no furnishings. The rest of the boat, except an awning over the end on which the crew sit, and the stern, is completely occupied by a built-in box filled with sand, upon which the cooking is done, is utilized in ponds formed adjacent thereto when the river is in flood.

Pao d'Assucar is so called because of a large pile on the river front which looks like sugar loaf, but, unfortunately for the town, it acts as a sandbank and causes the sand to be thrown up in such quantities that the portion of the town adjacent thereto has to be periodically cleared.

Piranhas is a picturesque village built in terraces around the curve of a practical bend in the hill. At this port one hears much of the "piranhas," or shark, which is found along the whole San Francisco river, though said to be in greater numbers here than elsewhere. This fish has a peculiar shaped head with serrated teeth bent backward. It is of carnivorous habits, frequently attacking and biting pieces out of animals which go down to the river to drink. Even men are known to have been victims to it.

From Piranhas there is a railroad to Jatoba 72 miles distant, where navigation for the upper San Francisco is resumed. A little more than half way to Jatoba is the Falls Station, a dismal place with only a closed-in shop surrounded by a thatched roof in the falls being there to stop at Pedras, a small village reached just before the station. Here guides, horses and food can be procured for the rest of the journey, which will take from two to three hours' riding.

The best time to the falls is best made very early in the morning, otherwise the heat is so intense that the trip would not be enjoyable. The road is frequently through dense thickets in which one finds oneself (elix concord). Wild cats, deer, peccaries (cavies) and a catlike animal hunted by the natives (the jaguar), several varieties of small monkeys and birds. Here parrots, trogons, wild pigeons and doves occur in great numbers.

Paulo Affonso seems to have moods, its appearance markedly differing with the seasons, or more properly speaking, with the volume of water in the river, which is dependent upon season.

The writer has made the trip there three times, and each time the river is more straight, it is hemmed in by banks so that the benefit of the breeze, which follows the turns of the river.

Between Penedo and Piranhas there are several towns of importance, the chief of which are Propria, Sergipe, and S. Bras, Tralpu and Pao d'Assucar, in the state of Sergipe, and Pedras, in the state of Bahia.

All of these places are of interest to warrant ships, as they are the river ports of large sections in which cotton, beans, corn, rice and cattle are raised in large quantities. Rice is chiefly raised along the river itself and in ponds formed adjacent thereto when the river is in flood.

Living near the falls are a few men who know the most accessible footpath to the various points of interest, will act as guides for a small fee. However, they are not obtrusive or insistent in proffering their services; on the contrary, one may take inquiry to find them.

The falls are slightly crescentic in form. The main body of water rushes down the steep incline of the last rapids to the sea in Cochoera, where it hurlts with great impetuosity against a steep black wall directly in front of it, rebounding, whirling, churning and foaming, only to be dashed over the rocks at a right angle to its original course, by the dancing, foaming waters of the Anquinghu before the water can recover its natural appearance. The width of the river at this point is about 50 feet, and the depth of the water at the base of the falls is given as 86 feet. The river then rushes straight on for a few hundred feet, only to be hurried back by a rock wall 300 feet high, forming the lower whirlpool, from which it finally escapes at a right angle and passes for some miles through a narrow gorge.

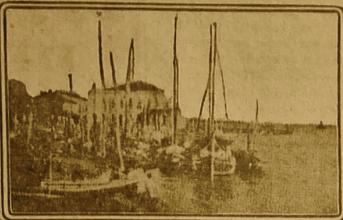

The guide next leads one to the river above, where, having a long line of black rock, it is broad and quiet, with nothing to suggest the turbulent waters just left. Continuing upstream, one sees numerous islands, mere rocks projecting like monoliths from the water, and notes that all ready the water has commenced to hurry.

A short distance below the river meets its first leap of 30 feet. This is followed by the "Valven de Cima," or upper cataract, a miniature whitewater falls, which is well worth a visit at off-rent intervals. Farther on, the rock banks of the river approach each other and through clefs in the rock the river is compressed into narrow branches. Some of which are from 15 to 20 feet and descend in a series of seething foam, dashes down the steep incline with a fury that almost causes the earth to shake and with a roar that can be heard for miles, thus forming the soul-inspiring rapids.

According to the guide, the trip to the falls so would not be completed without a visit to Afonso's style of "bathing," "Praia do Morroso" (baths) as he calls it. To see this one is induced to climb, crawl, and if not very careful, fall down the zigzag path leading to the edge of the lower whitewater after literally scrambling over the rocks through which it is conducted to the large gaping entrance of the cave. The cave itself is disappointing. It is nothing more than a large opening in the bank, and is uninteresting unless one excepts the great number of vampire bats which inhabit it. These are very troublesome to the cattle raisers in the vicinity.

From the mouth of the cave one has a good view of the whirlpool, but with thoughts of the difficult climb necessary to return it is doubtful if this side trip has been worth the trouble.

THE QUAY AT PENEDO

principal stages of the river and notes that the cataract itself does not change much in form as a result of volume of water. However, when the river is low, there are additional cataracts formed by the water passing through the ravines, which at other times are dry, and leaping over the high cliff direct into the lower stream. The tide, on the contrary, may materially change by any deviation in the volume of water and were they approachable when the river is high, they would doubtless be devoid of the great beauty which characterized them at other periods.

The ideal time to visit the falls is just after the river has fallen sufficiently to allow one to cross the numerous rocky ravines through which, when the river is high, water is rushing, preventing a near approach to the true river bed and the falls. Soon after the freshet, which is from November to March, the grass springs up in tufts, a variety of colors, the colors predominate, from the deep yellow of the trumpet flower, the rods and bluish of other plants, the beautiful pink flower of the "cebola brava," which, when eaten cause the death of many animals to the black seed pod of the "blackwood" bush and the exquisite white bloom of the "cerusus" plant, which grows at height, exhaling its delicate but penetrating odor. After a few weeks the dry season sets in. The grass and ephemeral flowering plants are then scorched by the sun, leaving only a few hardy bushes and the cacti.

Consisting as it does of a succession of rapids ending in a fall, opinions differ as to which is the most beautiful and awe-inspiring portion is the rapids. One in viewing them reaches the truth that the words of a noted tragedian that "if Niagara be the monarch of cataracts, Paulo Affonso is assuredly the king of rapids." Either as rapids or falls, it is indeed a masterpiece of the artful surroundings of Niagara, the work of man. Instead, it remains near the falls a few men who know the most accessible footpath to the various points of interest, will act as guides for a small fee. SCRATCHED SO SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

"I write to tell you how thankful I am for the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. My little niece had eczema for over a year, which had been treated by many physicians. She could not sleep at night. I took care of the child. It was all over her face and body, also on her head. She scratched so that she could not sleep nights. I used Cuticura Soap to wash her with and then applied Cuticura Ointment. I did not use quite half the Cuticura Soap and half the Cuticura Ointment. I used a solvent when you could see a change and they cured her nicely. Now she is eleven years old and has never been bothered with eczema since. My friends think it is just great the way the baby was cured by Cuticura. Send you a picture taken when she was about 18 months old."

"She was taken with the eczema when two years old. She was covered with big sores and her mother had all the best doctors and tried all kinds of salves and medicines without effect until we used Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. H. Kierman, 635 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1907."

MODERN KNIGHTHOOD.

The eyes of the people of the northwest are on Milwaukee this week. There is in session there at this time the biennial convention of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias and the encampment of the Uniform Rank, the military branch of the order. The people of the entire northwest are asking what this gathering from all the states, the Canadian Provinces and the islands of the Pacific means. What is this body of 20,000 uniformed men and what is their object in getting together?

The order of Knights of Pythias is one of the youngest in the family of altruistic fraternities. It was organized in the city of Washington, in February, 1864, and members of the first lodge are still living. It came into existence at a time when two sections of our country were torn by internecine strife—born of a desire to bring all humanity into a bond of universal brotherhood, recognizing the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Justus Henry Rathbone, the founder, had conceived the idea of an organization thus formed while teaching school at Eagle Harbor, Michigan, in 1858, and after a study of the story of Damon and Pythias, was so impressed with the spirit of friendship that he prepared the ritual and when he found the nation torn asunder, he launched his new order. The order was, at first, strictly American and contained a pledge of loyalty to the Government of the United States, but as the order grew and flourished it spread to Canadian soil and to other lands and it was found necessary to change that part of the ritual. Every Pythian is now pledged to loyalty to the government under which he lives, and the support of law in his community. The total active membership today embraces over 710,000 men, and its Uniform Rank is almost as large a body as the standing army of the nation. It is commanded by Arthur J. Stobart, of St. Paul, well known in Pine City and who formerly had a law office here. The Uniform Rank K. of P. is the only organization outside of the regular military establishment of the nation and the state guard, which was recognized by the government during the Spanish-American war. Its encampments are held every two years and its work is inspected by a regular army officer who makes reports to the commanding general of the army. The tactics used by the Uniform Rank are the same as those used in the regular army and the efficiency of the body has been attested by the most complimentary mention by the officers sent by the government to inspect it.

The order, Knights of Pythias, teaches the sublime principles of Friendship, Charity and Benevolence and is a potent factor in the upbuilding of the sturdy, active manhood of the nation. Its influence has been for the best interests of the nation and the community in which it is established and it has borne a glorious part in re-uniting the sections of this country. It stands today as one of the leading fraternal organizations of the world, and its growth in the past and its present activities indicate that the time is not far distant when it will outstrip all others and stand as the greatest fraternal organization of its day. Its principles and teachings are pure, ennobling and inspiring. It seeks to shape no man's career, but does ask that its members carry the teachings of this order of their every day life, and thus make them living principles, believing that in the true exemplification of the principles of the order men will be made better and that the sunlight of love and happiness radiating from its alters will dispel the clouds of cruelty and wrong and that all mankind will be made better by its teachings.

The coming of the order to the northwest for this convention will and should not only attract the public attention to the order, but should prove an inspiration to its members.

THERE is much cheap talk going on just now among many friends of the dear people. It is noteworthy that these friends to "God's patient poor" all want an office.

THE primary election law is a beautiful theory when viewed from a distance. When examined in practical operation, like many other theories, it is a flat failure.

THE REAL difference between President Taft and the insurgents, who criticize him, is that the President does things now while those who criticize him tell of what they are going to do.

JUST PLAIN, good old Republican is good enough for us and it doesn't require any delegates to describe Minnesota Republicanism. The platform of 1908 is our creed and Taft is its exponent.

WHEN Minnesota republicans in their convention refused to endorse insurrection the east sat up and took notice of the fact that after all Minnesota wasn't as far off politically as they had thought her to be.

THE test of fairness comes when the individual finds that his opinion is in conflict with the majority. The man of broad mind is willing to admit that he may be wrong, the egotist recognizes no opinion but his own.

SATURDAY CUMMINGS, of Iowa, says he is not going to organize a new political party. Probably not. Neither is he going to steal the Republican party. He will probably drop into the Democratic party or resurrect the "Pop" corpse.

IT IS NOT always the man who is the loudest in his profession who is the safest party leader. It is easy to mislead the people by professing to be their friend. The man of honor is the one who dares to stand up for the right at all times.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT says that he does not intend to dictate in American politics, but that he is going to keep the men who have helped him. So far as the American people are concerned, they will heartily agree with his determination. He is a great man and a good man, but we there are others just as good and we need no dictator.

MEN do not make issues in politics. The average politician wishes they did. Issues are the outgrowth of public sentiment. The issues of a campaign are the crystallization of the enlightened public sentiment of the state. There are going to be some new issues made soon and they will be made by the people and will be of far more importance than the political future of any man.

WHEN the Democratic party in its platform applauded "republicans" for their part in the last congress it looks as though the applauded members of the party were pretty good democrats. But you will notice that it was the insurgent republicans that were commended. In fact there is so little difference between the democrats and the insurgents that they can both subscribe to the same creed—anything to discredit the administration.

DO NOT forget that in 1890 William McKinley and the McKinley bill were the subject of the same criticism that today is being heaped upon the Payne-Aldrich bill. William McKinley was defeated for re-election in his own district in 1890 as a result of the public clamor led by the same press that is today roasting Cannon, Aldrich, Payne and other leaders. The people believed them then and they believe the same papers today. It took six years to give the public a chance to learn that McKinley was right in 1890 and they elected him President in 1892 as no other man had ever been elected before. How long will it take the public to get its eyes open now?

IT ISN'T safe to believe all you read. The man who is most anxious to deceive is sometimes the smoothest in his protestations of honesty. It took a law suit down in Milwaukee to develop the fact that LaFollette, the great apostle in pure politics, had thrown Ike Stephenson because he had refused to put up $100,000.00 of good, hard cash to help along LaFollette's presidential campaign. In reading LaFollette's Weekly it should not be lost sight of that the publication is run by the men who are trying to stir up a stink in the Republican party in order that their apostle of purity might be brought into prominence as a possible Presidential candidate and if successful they are to receive their reward in the lemons and fishes to be dealt out by this arch plunderer of public trusts and past master in the art of political plumb distribution.

THE growing insurgent movement is one of the things we read about now-a-days, which frightens some of the people who do not realize that the Cummings and LaFollette are but few in number and high in voice. These men would die in obscurity were it not for the fact that they must pose as reformers in order to attract attention. This insurgent movement will be so strong that it will blow itself all out before another Presidential election comes around. This seems to the Pioneer to be the situation from a disinterested standpoint. The people are not led by the blatant newspaper today as they were a few years ago nor are they misled by the dramatic posings of the pompadoured tragedian, but they sit down and think some things out for themselves. The daily press is so thoroughly dominated by personal interests or so inspired by the $$$ arguments of those who are interested in misleading "the people, that they have long ago ceased to be a fair expression of public feeling.

THERE is no question in the minds of the people who are watching the trend of affairs, as to the future of the American saloon. It is the paramount issue in American politics to-day. County option is but a step toward its extinction. There is no question as to that. With county option in the southern states the saloons soon had to go. With county option in Minnesota the saloon would not last a year in any of the counties with the possible exception of Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis and it is doubtful if they would be able to hold these long as wet territory. The settlement of this great question is on right now and the American people will settle it right. The time has passed when a man can straddle the liquor question. You are either for the saloon or you are against it, and there is no half way business about it either. The man who refuses to vote for a county option bill in the legislature this winter will have to defend his position on moral grounds when he comes home in the spring. The question of expediency and policy will not be considered. Like the slavery question it is a question of right or wrong. If the saloon is right stand by it, but if wrong it must go.

THE defeat of W. J. Bryan in the Nebraska convention last week is the leading subject of discussion in the papers. The Pioneer has never been an adherent of Mr. Bryan's and has never regarded him as just sound on political questions, but like all who have heard him it has been an admirer of the grand personality of this man who has held control of his party in his state and nation for so many years. His defeat in the Nebraska convention will strengthen him with the people of the nation. It was certainly a magnificent spectacle he presented, when with the organization against him he made the fight of his life for what he believed to be the greatest issue confronting the American people to-day. With the Republican party of Nebraska on record in favor of county option and the organized liquor interests of the state opposing it, and in control of the party, he took sides for county option. His party refused to follow his lead and placed itself squarely in league with the liquor interests of the state. That he could not follow his party when its position conflicted with his ideas of sound morals is in conformity with the opinion all who have known him have had of the "peerless one." In his defeat he was far more magnificent than he would have been had he surrendered his conscience to the demands of the interests in control of

GREAT ORE INCREASE

MESABA RANGE PRODUCTION JUMPS 16,000,000 TONS IN SEVEN YEARS.

GOVERNMENT GIVES OUT FIGURES

Much Money Spent in Improving Region—One-Half of the Iron Imports Come from the Island of Cuba.

Washington, D. C.—A great advance in iron ore production has been made in the Mesaba range in Minnesota, where the shipments have increased from 13,000,000 tons in 1902 to 23,000,000 tons in 1908, according to a report of the Census Bureau on the movement of Lake Superior iron.

In that region where the increase has resulted from the extension activity of an opened deposit and from the extension of the operations of the ore fields beyond the Mississippi river, the expenditures for railroads, permanent mine equipment and expenditures indicate a faith in its future.

FATAL RACE RIOTS

TEXAS NEGROES HAVE THREE-DAY BATTLE WITH TROOPS AND POSSES.

18 BLACKS, 3 WHITES SLAIN

Shooting of Colored Man Who Had Threatened Farmer's Family Brought Climax to racial Feeding In Viscinity of Palestine.

Palestine, Tex., Aug. 1.—Following a pitched battle between the negro farmers of this section in which at least 200 blacks took part and three companies of state militia from Houston and Galveston and a detachment of state rangers participated for hours and hours, it was said that 18 negroes and three whites have been killed.

Rioting Lasts Three Days.

Beginning Friday afternoon the riot between the negroes and the segregated confinement will continue right through the night. The soldiers and sailors augmented by posses of citizens and farmers from Palestine, Jacksonville and other smaller places in this section surrounded the negroes demands for a general amnesty seven miles from Palestine. Throughout the night the negroes and posses exchanged shots and at dawn the soldiers prepared to rush the negro stronghold.

NEGROES ARE ENTRENCHED.

Canvassing the soldiers and citizens felt their way through the woods and had advanced almost a mile before a shot was fired. Suddenly coming upon a group of entrenched negroes the soldiers were repulsed and ran. Another shot was fired. And so it went throughout the night. The negroes fired desperately, knowing the quarter would be denied any caught. Two hours of fighting from behind trees, stumps and any available cover made life hard work for the soldiers.

Inspector Dew stood face to face with the man he had let slip by in London and was certain that the man disguised as Rev. John Robinson was his quarry. Inspector Dew continued his search in New York to find his prisoners. There he found a doctor named John L. Younger, encamped in the court house yard. The troops will protect the scene of the riot and protect their prisoners now in jail.

According to the authorities the situation is now well in hand and no further trouble is anticipated.

Cars were stoned and the non-union conductors and motormen were threatened with stones. It was said that fifty persons were more or less severely injured, most of them being citizens who were riding on the cars when the attacks were made. ANNUAL LOSS IS ENORMOUS

Two Hundred Million Dollars a Year Might Be Added to Wealth of Country.

Computing that there are in the United States at least four million negroes and 125,000,000 persons who can be cured for charitable, semi-charitable hospitals and sanatoria and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis estimates that the annual cost to the country for the treatment of the negroes is $1,000 per head, $100,000,000 at the rate of $1.00 per day per patient. At the lowest possible estimate the country loses $250,000,000 a year from the incapacity of these, innocent victims of disease. Thus, the nation loses an amount saving of $150,000,000 a year to the United States if all victims of consumption who are too poor to afford proper treatment in expensive sanatoria were cured for at least 15 years. And this annual gain does not include the enormous saving that would accrue from the lessened infection due to the segregation of negroes in institutions.

CHEER-JOKES & CO.

King Edward's great nature was illustrated in the others night by a London correspondent at the Press Club in New York.

"The king," said the correspondent, "was visiting Rufford Abbey, and one night in a room in a wing of the castle, he took a walk over the preserves.

"Suddenly Lord Arthur, a big burly fellow with a shabby fellow with a white feathered cap, burst upon him.

"Sir," said Lord Arthur to the king, "this fellow is a bad egg." This is the second time I've caught him poaching."

"But the king's handsome face beamed, and he laughed his gay and tolerant laugh.

"Oh, let him go," he said. "If he really were a bad egg, you know, he wouldn't poach."

THE DENTIST'S JOKE.

At a recent dinner of the Authors' Club in London to Mr. Owen Seaman, the editor of "Punch," Mr. Walter Banim, another member of the staff of "Punch," referred to the fact that the man with the largest sense of humor he had ever struck was an Englishman —a dentist. He went to him after suffering from a toothache, when the dentist had given a tooth, leaving him with pain for some distance and shot by a posse when he refused to surrender. With the shooting of the negro the rioting began.

STARS NEVER SLOCUM.

The rioting began near the village of Slocum, where a negro who is accused as the cause of the racial feeling.

First, the refusal of a negro to pay an obligation for which a white farmer stood sponsor. This was some days ago. Later a white man received notice that he should perform road work with a posse of negroes. The negro refused. The white man armed himself with a shotgun and went to him with a tomahawk. The negro fled, however, and the white man followed him, shot him in the back, and pulled out a tooth, leaving him writhing in pain, and took the tooth to the window, where he laughed quite heartily. He groaned: "What's the joke?" "Wrong tooth," said the dentist.

WE KNOW THE KIND.

Little Edward, aged four, was an only child. He was anxious for a baby sister, and was talking of it one day with a friend of the family. In the friend's family was a baby girl one year. The lady said: "Edward, you want have my baby; she is pretty and sweet."

"Oh," said Edward, "I don't want an old baby. I want a new one who is young on but tacum powder." —Red Hen.
