DO YOU KNOW?

That still air will not combat heat or cold? That is why a dead air space is a better protection against cold than a solid stone wall. If your windows are fitted with good storm sash the cold cannot get in, any more than it does through the wall. A single window is almost no protection. It's the dead air space that does the business, and for a dead air space you need storm sash. We can give you the kind of storm sash you want. We have them to fit any window. And don't forget what

CAN'G COMPOUND COUNCIL MEETS

The State Dairy and Food Department Issues a Bulletin.

State of Minnesota, State Dairy and Food Department. Office of Inspector of Canneries.

St. Paul, Minn. Sep. 1, 1910.

This office is required under the provisions of the canning factory law to give information to canners of vegetables and fruits. I therefore deem it my duty to inform and warn the public against the use of so-called "canning compounds." There are such compounds on the market advertised and used in preserving fruits and vegetables and as they are composed of 97 per cent. boric acid, they are very harmful. Their use in any kind of food should not be permitted. It is against the law to use these compounds, or any other chemical preservatives, and persons will be prosecuted for the sale of any food articles containing such preservatives. Under our laws the sale of these "canning compounds" cannot be prohibited, but the sale of the food articles preserved cannot be legally sold or used in any public place, and prosecution will follow by the State Food Department when evidence is available.

We do not know to what extent these compounds are used in home canning, but will give a warning on this poisonous preservative. The only proper method is to use pure water, cane sugar, pure salt and sterilization by heat.

In all vegetables and fruits canned at factories, nothing of a preservative nature is used except cane sugar, salt, water and proper sterilization by heat. The reason that corn and vegetables cannot be prepared at home is that the excessive heat required cannot be reached in the home kitchen.

Procure the bulletin on canning factories issued by the State Dairy and Food Department, so therefore our canned vegetables and fruits in tin cans are pure, although different in quality, but Minnesota goods are found to be of an excellent quality.

29 IN ILLINOIS WRECK

COACHES WHIRLING DOWN HILL MEET HEAD-ON AT SHARP CURVE.

ON ILLINOIS TROLLEY SYSTEM

Accident at Staunton, Ill., is Laid to Negligence of One Crew—Victims Bound for St. Louis Buried in the Wreckage.

Staunton, Illinois.—Disregard of the train dispatcher's orders, and a sharp bend in the track which hid two rushing trolleys can from each other were responsible for the most appalling wreck in the history of the electric railroads of Illinois. Twenty-eight people were instantly killed, one died on the way to a hospital, another is not expected to live and 26 other people sustained more or less serious injury. The collision occurred on the lines of the Illinois Traction system two miles north of this place. One crew is blamed.

The blame for the accident is laid by the officials of the road on the crew of local car No. 14, which was personally piloted by Leonard, conductor, and John Lierman, motorman, both of Staunton. This car was northbound, running on its regular schedule, and had orders to await at Staunton for two sections of train No. 73, which was bound for St. Louis. The northbound car waited until the first section had passed and then, in total disregard of orders, pulled out on the main track and started ahead.

Two miles north of Staunton is Dickerson's curve, a sharp bend in the track toward which the ground slopes both from the north and from the south. Dense foliage grows on the inner side of the curve, and it is impossible to see for any distance ahead. Both cars moving at fully 40 miles an hour approached this curve from opposite directions, both of them tearing along on a down grade. The motorman did not detect the danger until the cars were too close to avoid an accident.

Both Lierman and Leonard, of car No. 14, and Conductor Duncan and Motorman Young, of car No. 73, realizing that there was no hope of avoiding the collision, shrieked to the passengers to save themselves, and then leaped for their lives. All four were badly brushed and scratched, but escaped without serious injury.

The northbound car tore into car No. 73, splitting it wide open, and literally raked the passengers from their seats. Both cars reared on end and then fell back into a tangled mass of splintered wood and twisted iron which was packed with dead and dying, and down the sides of which, in a dozen places, the blood trickled in streams. Not a single passenger of the southbound car was killed or seriously injured.

Among the wounded on the car was J. E. Berry of Springfield, Ill., land commissioner for the Illinois Traction system, who expired just as he reached the hospital. Mr. Berry was traveling with W. W. Street of St. Louis, the assistant trainer of the traction system, D. E. Black of Springfield, the assistant superintendent of motive power and equipment, and A. Price, auditor of disbursements of the traction company. All four of the officials are dead. Street, Black and Price were killed outright, while Berry survived his injuries but a short time.

The passengers of car fourteen were all fortunate in that a greater proportion of them escaped death or injury.

Word of the accident was immediately telephoned to Springfield, to Peoria and to St. Louis and relief trains were started at once from all three points, carrying all of the physicians and nurses that were immediately available.

Bodies Badly Mangled.

Many of the dead are so shockingly mangled that it is impossible that some of them may never be known. People who had friends and relatives up on the wrecked cars and who had not seen them since the accident walked weeping past the rows of dead and were utterly unable to distinguish a feature that would lead to the identification of those they sought.

QUITTING THE FARM.

There has been much discussion of late as the best method of keeping the boys and girls on the farm. The tendency to move to the cities is constantly cropping out and our large cities are filled with young men and young women who are working from ten to eighteen hours a day, sleeping in a hall bed room, and eating at cheap lunch rooms who might be the owners of the old home farm had they stayed in the country. Instead of being employes they might be employers and enjoy the freedom of the most independent life known to man, as it is they are mere cogs in the great industrial wheel that is grinding out millions in wealth and sacrificing hundreds of thousands of lives every year. In spite of this fact the movement from the farm to the city goes on year after year. It is not the excitement of city life; it is not, as many suppose, the better opportunities for advancement that the city affords; it is not because of the ambition the young people have to make a place in the world. They know that they have three chances on the farm to one in the city. They know that in the city they lead a life more isolated than they do on the farm. They know that they work harder and get less for it. Why then is this annual exodus?

There have been many reasons advanced but the best that we have seen comes from a man who made a drive of several hundred miles through an agricultural community recently. He says the trouble lies in the dissatisfaction the young people feel at the condition in most rural homes. By far the larger number of farmers wives do too much work outside of their regular house work. They are overworked. As a result they neglect their houses and the kitchen is the only room in the house that is used. This room is not kept as clean and tidy as it might be. In many homes a cream separator occupies part of the room, the meals are eaten as the members of the family happen to come in, off of a table covered with an oil-cloth with dishes cracked and chipped. The family may keep many cows, and most do, but a dish of cream on the table is a rarity. From the kitchen after shore time the family go to bed to be called before day break to do the chores again. There is no life for the members of the family aside from the grind of every day toil. There is no order or seam about the family and there isn't any life in ten in the village or city who lives in the slipshod manner that many of the farmers families live. Can it be wondered that the boys and girls long to get away where they can live as others do? A farmer's son recently said that he would rather live in town and work hard all the year round where he could go and sit down to a meal like a man than to own the best farm in his county and live the way most farmers do.

There is absolutely no excuse for this. The farmer who says to his guest "You are welcome if you can live as we farmers live" admits that he is negligent in his duty to his family. With free mail delivery, with the telephone with the opportunities there are for social intercourse and with the chance for development that might be within the reach of every boy and girl in the country there is no reason why they should not enjoy living in the country far better than slaving himself out in the city. The home life of the farm is largely responsible for the condition and the best way to keep the boys at home is to make them feel that they have a home worthy of their attention. A clean table cloth and clean napkins will mean clean hands and clean faces. It will mean a general cleaning up around the place and will mean more than that, it will mean an interest in the home and its surroundings. When a farmer cannot keep his boys and girls at home it means that there is something wrong with his surroundings.

The magazines are devoting considerable space just now to articles on the conditions surrounding the female help in department stores and shops in the cities. If half these articles tell us true, the future of our country is imperiled by the life these future mothers lead. The Pioneer finds it rather hard to arouse much sympathy for these girls. These same girls could make a good, comfortable living and enjoy a normal existence amid surroundings conducive to both morals and good health by remaining in the country and living where they belong. It is the unreasonable abhorrence of house-work and the desire to wear showy clothes that fills the stores with girls and that fills the ranks of the demi monde with those who sacrifice themselves to the unnatural life so many of the working girls of the city lead. It is impossible to pass laws that will surround these girls with normal conditions. What they need most is normal training. A law which prohibited the employment of any female under twenty-one years of age in any shop or store, except where owned by her parents, might bear rich fruit in many ways.

The decision of the Newfoundland fisheries disputes by the court of arbitration at The Hague in which five of the questions submitted were decided in favor of the United States and two in favor of Canada will probably settle the questions which have disturbed the two nations since the war of 1812. One of the most important features of the decision is the fact that the American member of the court voted against his own country's contention on the two most important questions submitted. That he did this does not condemn the contention as being unconscionable, but it does characterize the judge and the other members of the court as being men of unusual judicial integrity. That the American member decided against the interests of the New England fisher men means simply that they were in the wrong and that as a matter of law their contention could not be maintained. This is one instance where common sense and a judicial determination of national differences has settled a matter which oceans of blood shed upon the field of battle would never have determined, for "might is not always right." Though we might have been able to force our contention upon our neighbors at the point of the bayonet, the peaceful submission of the people to the decision of this court is a higher tribute to our nation than would have been the most glorious victories won on the armed field.

Did it ever occur to you that the immense bills for public meetings, tons of printing, brass bands, banners and all the things which go to make up a primary campaign, must be paid for by someone? Take the immense amount of work done in the first Congressional district: Has Anderson, the county lawyer, enough of his own to carry on such a campaign as he carried on for a $1500 job? Someone is putting up money in this country this year and it isn't the dear people. A careful investigation of campaign contributions (which cannot be made under any law in the world) would disclose the fact in all probability that the men who are paying the bills in many a congressional district in Republican states in an effort to defeat trained men, are the same men who are putting up money to defeat leaders among the Democrats in Democratic states. The whole trouble seems to be that there is a movement on foot, backed by plenty of capital, with which to hire special trains to tour the country and finance campaigns whose object is the overthrow of men who cannot be covered and who have the ability to protect the interests of their constituents in the hope that out of the wreck there may be brought into power men whose position can be used for the ends of the people who are paying the bills. A new man in congress is an asset in the hands of the schemers. There are hundreds of reasons why the voters should stand by our Congressman this year and not one why he should be turned down.

LEGISLATIVE ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the voters of the 32nd Legislative District:
In response to the urgent request of many of the leading citizens of the counties of Chicago, Pine and Kanabec, which comprise this legislative district, I have decided to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Representative.

In order that the voters of the district may understand my position upon some of the leading questions now before the public and which the next legislature will be called upon to consider, I pledge myself, if nominated and elected, to vote for and work to secure the passage of a county option law, such laws to give the majority of the voters of a county the right to regulate the licensing of saloons within such county.

I also pledge myself to support legislative re-apportionment, a constitutional amendment permitting a one-mill road tax and the federal income tax amendment.

Senator Clapp's record in congress has been such as to entitle him to the support of every citizen of the state, and especially of this district wherein the distinguished senator made his summer home. His record meets with my hearty approval and if I am a member of the next legislature, I pledge myself, not only to vote for his return, but to do everything within my power, honorably, to bring about his reelection.

I wish to thank the voters of the district for the liberal support in the past and assure them that their support at the coming primaries will be greatly appreciated.

HENRY P. WEBB.

FOR COUNTY SURVEYOR.

I hereby endorse myself as a candidate for the Republican nomination to the office of County Surveyor. Owing to present obligations to the company I am with, I shall be unable to devote much time to canvassing, but I shall greatly appreciate the help of friends throughout the county.

H. W. AKIN.

TO THE VOTERS OF PINE COUNTY.

Upon assurance of support from all parts of the County and at the request of many of my friends, I hereby announce my candidacy at the approaching primary for the office of County Attorney on the Republican ticket.

If nominated and later elected, it shall be my endeavor to impartially perform to the best of my ability all the many duties imposed upon the office by law. I shall neither shield nor persecute any individual or class, but shall at all times assist the County Sheriff and other peace officers in the enforcement, throughout the County, of all criminal laws and endeavor to protect and conserve the civil and property interests of the County and its taxpayers.

Yours sincerely,
W. H. LAMSON.

DEER VALLEY.

E. J. Heineman is building a chimney for his father-in-law A. E. Stevens.

Wolves were seen back of Steve Gillig's barn last week about 5 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Bruce, who is quite feeble had to take another trip to St. Paul to see his doctor. We hope when he returns he will be a well man.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, who were married at Pine City last week, are now residing in the McGeer home, near the Alvie Stevens mill. We wish the happy couple a long and happy married life.

John Franson, John Collins and Steve Gillig have done some good work on the coruro this week, and it makes quite an improvement. E. J. Heineman will work out the road tax for some other party and with a wheel scraper fill and level it up.

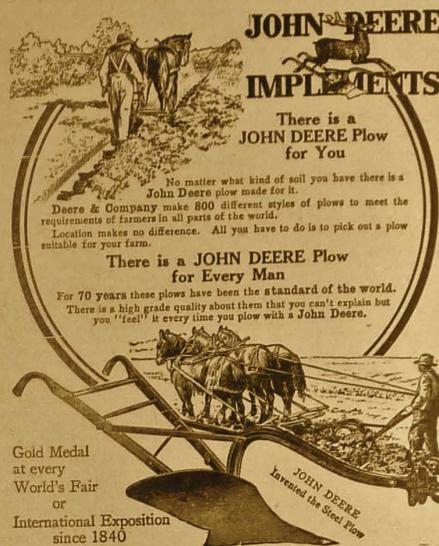

Mr. and Mrs. and Master Collins ate dinner at the Chas. Heineman home Sunday, and according to their report had a very pleasant time. During the afternoon Mrs. H. played about fifty selections on the phonograph, which was enjoyed by all.

The stone foundation for the Deer Valley school house was finished on Thursday by the contractor, Mr. Peterson. E. J. Heineman will paint the floor, and the outfit painting will be let to the lowest bidder. The school opened last Monday morning with Miss Rose Dorscheck as teacher.

We believe that John Franson has the largest and prettier number of pumpkins of any farmer in Hook Creek township. There are any quantity of them and some of them so large that a man can hardly handle them. He also cut three crops of tame hay off a piece of ground in front of his residence.

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Michigan but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We hid to his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing and finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as if nothing could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little one suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1483 Aichison St., Aichison, Kan., Oct. 15, 1907."

His First Lesson in Economy.

"When I was a very small boy and a dime looked pretty big to me, I met John H. Parley—who had always been my good friend—on the street one 'June day,' says Frank Harris.

"Frank," he said, "the Fourth of July is coming soon. You'll want some change then and you'll have some money for firecrackers, torpedoes, lemonade and peanuts."

"I emptied my pockets into his hand and every day thereafter until the Fourth I turned over to him my small earnings. When the day came around I had a fund that enabled me to celebrate in proper style, while many of my playmates were flat broke. It was my first lesson in thrift, and it was a good one. Hundreds of Cleveland people would be glad today to testify to the fact that when John H. Parley was a friend of a man or a boy he was a friend indeed."—Cleveland Leader.

Good Advice, but—

A traveler entered a railway carriage at a way station. The sole occupants of the compartment consisted of an old lady and her son, about twelve years old. Nothing notable occurred until the train steamed into the station at which tickets were collected. The woman, not having a ticket for the son, requested him to "corrie down."

The traveler intervened and suggested putting him under the seat.

"Man," said the mother, "he's as shair as dath; but there's twa under the seat already!"

Laundering Our Paper Money

By WALDON FAWCETT

THE treasury department at Washington has just completed a series of novel experiments and as a result of the outcome thereof is about to enter on a new activity which is to prove one of the most interesting as well as one of the most effective economies introduced during the present era of retrenchment in Uncle Sam's administrative affairs. The innovation is nothing short of a scheme for laundering our currency. All the processes of washing, starching and ironing will be carried out just as though the articles to be cleaned were linen garments instead of the paper currency. The effect of this scheme for freshening the currency, when once the government's plant is in full operation, will be to increase the normal life of our paper circulating medium and to save the government considerably more than $1,000,000 per year.

That paper money can be washed successfully is not, of course, an entirely new discovery. From time to time in years gone by individuals on their own initiative have sought to cleanse dirty bank notes with soap and water. The importance of the experiments lately carried out by the government, however, lies in the fact that proof has been gained that paper money can be washed, not as a makeshift, but on a wholesale scale. Equally important is the finding that this rejuvenation can be accomplished cheaply, and finally there is a third triumph for present-day experiment in demonstration that laundered currency can be given the "body" and "surface" that is responsible for the crisp, crackle qualifications that endear "new money" to many people.

The treasury officials hope soon to have in full operation a laundry plant—located at the United States bureau of engraving and printing at Washington—which will be capable of giving a new lease of life to soiled and wrinkled currency at the rate of 100,000 bills per day. Present estimates of the new money. From the drying room the washed bills "go to the starching room, where what might be termed the "starching" process takes place. This consists in passing each bill, by machinery, through a bath of alum and glue which restores the "body" which has been lost during the washing. Next the bills are packed between sheets of cardboard and are then subjected to the "ironing." This consists of pressure between the rollers of a powerful press just as the flat pieces in the ordinary steam laundry are run through a mangle. The operation not only renders the laundered money perfectly flat but imparts to it the distinctive surface or finish of new money.

Already the treasury officials have planned that if the laundry at the headquarters at Washington proves as successful and economical as it promises to do, similar laundries will be installed at all the sub-treasuries throughout the country. Moreover, Uncle Sam is going to encourage banks, or associations of bankers in the more remote cities of the country to establish their own laundries for washing currency instead of sending it to Washington for redemption, as is the present plan. It is calculated that a money laundry of modest capacity can be installed at a cost as low as $500 to $700, and it is figured that banks in many cities would save this in a few months. Of course the government redeems without charge all the worn-out currency sent in by the banks, but the banks must pay the express charges both ways on the currency, and it is figured that the express charges for many such institutions far exceed the outlay that would be required for the operation of a money laundry. One Chicago bank that sends a cart load of currency to the treasury every few days pays thousands of dollars a year in transportation charges. With a view to further aiding the banks that decide to launder their own currency the treasury department is planning to make public all its laundry recipes and formulas when it has been determined by the present tests just what are the best ingredients for cleansing, bleaching and sterilizing the money. The bleaching, it may be added is one process that requires the exercise of care lest the money in the wash be injured.

ALLIGATOR SHOOTS CHUTES.

The very last creature that the average man would select as a trick animal is the huge, slug-sometimes hit a swift pace. It has even been trained to shoot the chutes with easy grace.

The feat is performed regularly at an alligator farm in California, the big saurian waddling up the incline at the other side and sliding down.

At this novel farm there are 500 or more specimens, ranging in size from the huge brawny to the newly hatched, hardlike youngsters. They are raised for their hides, although the sale of the little fellows for "pets" and the admission to the grounds help swell the profits of this unusual business.—Scientific American.

KENTUCKY CHIVALRY

For once in his life a Kentucky colonel found himself in a queer predicament because of his courtly politeness extended previously to a young woman at the reception tendered by the Knight Templar of his state. Past Commander Shackelford of Kentucky was the man who suffered the unhappy quarter hour.

Answering a telephone call at the Congress hotel he heard a sweet voice saying:

"Oh, Colonel Shackelford, I am going away this afternoon. Are you going to say good-by to me, aren't you?"

"I certainly am," replied Colonel Shackelford, "though I am most sorry to hear that you are going away. (Who in thunder can she be!)"

"You remember me, don't you?"

"Indeed, it would be quite impossible to forget you. (Ye gods! Who is she? Help, help!)"

"You know you said that I was the most charming girl you had met in Chicago."

"And I never retract anything I say. I was sure of it when I said it. I am sure of it now. (Say, this is awful!)"

"Well, I expect to meet some friends in the parlor in half an hour, and I shall hope to see you. Now don't forget Good-by."

"Good-by. I shall be there. Good-by."

First he importuned some other Kentuckians, after pleading them to secrecy, but they could not help him and one said:

"Why, Shackelford, you said the same thing to about a dozen women at the reception."

So at the appointed time Colonel Shackelford was forth in the parlor, and when he returned his face was wreathed in smiles.

"How about it?" was the anxious query.

"Gentlemen, as a member of the Masonic tra-

DOCTORS ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gales, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was a storm in my thick-bone. In a short time a bump came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was so bad without a foot-water bottle applied to that side, I had found one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that it would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away. I had a letter from Dr. J. B. Hertz, 715 Mineral Ave., Gales, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ill-health, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irritable bowels, neuralgia, headache, heart-ache, indigestion, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the results have been worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

PIMPLES

I tried all kinds of blood remedies which failed to do me any good, but I found the right thing at last. My face was full of pimples and black-heads. After taking Cascades they all left. I am continuing the use of them and recommending them to my friends. I feel fine when I rise in the morning. Hope to have a chance to recommend Cascades."—Fred C. Witten, 75 Elm St., Newark, N. J.

Millicent's Masquerade

By MARTHA McCULLOCH-WILLIAMS

Behind the frowning providence of a sudden summer rainstorm, Fate hid for Millicent Ware a smiling face. She stood in the uncertain shelter of a roadside elm, trying vainly to shield her hat with a ridiculous parasol, and speculating what chance had such an object as she knew she looked of getting the place she sought.

To be exact, the place was that of a nursery governess in the Alsteme family—the agency had sent her on the barest long chance. Because she needed work so desperately, also because the morning had promised so bright, she had put on her modest but—her white linen suit, multi-trimmed hat and patent leather shoes. She had been particularly proud of herself as she stepped from the train at the nearest station. There was nobody to meet her, and her purse fortitude even suburban cab fares armed with confused directions and the rash confidence of youth, she had set out on foot for Overhill, the Alsteme place—and this was the result.

"Hopelessly drabbed," she said half aloud, looking herself up and down as she spoke. "And at least half a mile to go if this rain ever holds up! Heigho! If everybody is rich up is anybody permitted to own an auto?"

As though answering the question an auto, a big limousine, dashed out of a cross track upon the hard wide roadway—and in making a turn skidded, fetching up, at last, less than two feet from Millicent, but not until it had spat her almost from head to foot. The muddy puddle which had helped to steady her was at least four inches deep. She had struck back but too late—even the tip of her nose had a brown drop on it. Of course, the machine would go past her. How ever would she get back to town?

"Oh, I'm so, so sorry!" a girl's voice said. The door had been flung open. Within it she saw a fair double of herself, a girl, blue-eyed and tall as she was, with the same cleft chin, straight nose and yellow hair. The voice, too, seemed her own, as it went on eagerly.

"Get in! You must! I shall take you home with me—and send you to the laundry."

There was a bubbling laugh after the last word. Millicent got in, and was whisked forward, hardly knowing whether she were awake or dreaming.

Two hours later she was pinching herself to determine. This, although she sat at late luncheon in a fine country house, clothed in fine alien garments, eating strange things. Her double sat opposite her, smiling soft cooing smiles, and saying every little while:

"You will! That's a darling! I'll love you forever and ever—and it can't be half so bad, no matter how it turns out, as being a governess—those Alsteme children are young savages."

Two days later, still dazed, but full of inward chuckling, she was welcomed by an elderly couple as their own dear grand-daughter, Lily Haughton. They were childless, but had a grand-nephew for company, a tall, wearily handsome young person, who looked as though he did not know how to laugh.

Well Adapted to All General Uses for Breeding and Feeding Swine—Also for Granary.

(By J. C. SHAVELIN)

The illustrations show a good general purpose hog house, granary, and so on, adapted to all general uses.

for breeding, feeding and fattening hogs. The pen part is intended to be high, with an outside door to each compartment; also all departments connected by means of sliding doors operated from the outside. The granary is meant to be 10 feet high on top of the pens, and set back 1 foot on the inside to allow for room to

CANKER SORE MOUTH IN PIGS

Comparatively Slight Ailment Easily Cured if Animals Are Properly Fed and Sheltered.

(By A. S. VALENTINE, V. M.)

Most farmers are familiar with the ordinary forms of sore mouth in young pigs, which is a comparatively slight ailment and readily cured. It is indicated by redness and swelling of the gums and lining membranes of the mouth and may result in a few shallow ulcers.

Typing the head of the affected pig over and over again daily in a warm two per cent solution of permanganate of potash usually suffices to quickly restore normal conditions of the membranes, provided the pigs occupy clean pens, are properly fed, have good constitutions and are sufficiently exercised.

It is an altogether different matter, however, when pigs are kept in filthy quarters, where they are fed improper food and are deprived of adequate exercise, sunlight and fresh air.

A mild germ, known as Bacillus Neovaccinus, usually is present in such places and finding access to small cuts or sores upon the membranes of the mouth and skin of the nose quickly produces deep eating ulcers which in time may even affect the bones of the snout. The disease now present is termed "necrotic stomatitis" and is a most serious and deadly malady.

It may be prevented by providing brood sows a clean, disinfected, whitewashed, airy sunny, fresh bedded place in which to farrow. The bacteria mentioned is present in the manure of swine, hence the necessity of keeping the farrowing pen clean.

Also it is well to wash the udder of the sow with a two per cent solution of coal tar disinfectant before the pigs are allowed to suck for the first time and to repeat the washings at least once daily for a week or more.

As an extra precaution the little sharp teeth found in the mouths of some pigs at birth should be carefully slipped off with pliers to prevent them from lacerating the tongue or from scratching the noses of the pig's mates during play or fight.

When the disease is seen mix lime-water freely with the food of the sow, clean up, disinfect and whitewash the pens and put in fresh bedding. Scrape such areas thoroughly and then lightly cauterize with lunar caustic or dilute nitric acid. Split open each boil or round hunch on the nose and saturate with tincture of iodine.

Afterward use tincture of iodine freely once daily on sores outside of the mouth and apply a five per cent solution of permanganate of potash to the ulcers on the gums and lining membranes within the mouth.

Watch for Disease.

Keep watch of the animals while at pasture as well as when on dry fodder, and remember that the sores coalesce in either a dangerous disease of itself or a symptom of disease. Ascertain which it seems to be, and give a simple remedy at once, and then if doubtful as to the ability to combat the case, send for a veterinarian. But if the farmers would keep a closer watch over their animals there would be less need of the veterinarian who is usually called too late, or grudge-digger who does his work later.

ACT PROMPTLY.

Kidney troubles are too dangerous to neglect. Little disorders grow serious and the sufferer is soon in the grip of diabetes, dropsy or fatal Bright's disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all distressing kidney ills. They make sick kidneys strong, weak kidneys strong.

John J. Perry, Columbus, O., says: "I grew worse and worse until it seemed but a question of a few hours before I passed away. My wife and I would not see another day. I was called somewhat and at once began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I steadily improved until today I am in good health."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a bottle.

ENGAGEMENT NOW OUT.

Ethel—Weren't you surprised when you heard about my horse running away with me?

Frank—Not very. I'd do the same thing myself if I got the chance.

Now They Sleep Indecor.

George H. Beattie, jeweler in the old Arcade, and L. E. Ralston, auditor of the News, have filed and several of the News have decided that sleeping out in the open isn't all that it has been declared to be, says the Cleveland Leader.

They were both in a deep snore out at the Beattie farm, near Chagrin away team from the county fair city turned into the lane leading up to the Beattie estate and came along at full speed.

Round asleep, but dreaming of impending danger, Ralston rolled out of his cot toward the north, and Beattie from his toward the south. The runaway horses dashed between the sleepers, overturning everything in the way, but missing Beattie and Ralston who were too narrow to be measured.

Since that night Ralston has slept in his town house and Beattie has found a cot narrow to be measured of his house on his big plantation.

Points to Good Future.

Seven poor children, four girls and three boys, all about ten years old, went to a nearby seashore one day, in charge of their mother for a day's outing. The funds for the picnic were provided by two boys who sell papers and who live in one of the tenements from which the children were recruited. One of the women in charge of the children said that the boys had arranged the outing "of their own accord, and the remarkable thing is this: They are not good boys by any means and one of them is probably the naughtiest boy in the neighborhood. But we think that when boys do little things like this they will come out all right."—New York Tribune.

Why He Wouldn't Hurry.

They were riding to church and were late. Several of the party were worried and one remarked: "The audience will be waiting." "Well," observed the old pastor (who was to preach that forenoon), "don't let me fret over it if we are a little late. It reminds me of the man who was being taken to execution. His guards were greatly annoyed by the fact that they could not possibly get there on time. 'Never mind,' said the poor fellow, philosophically, 'Don't fuss over it. The people can wait. There'll be nothing like till I get there.'"

Flinging With Fashion.

That innate tendency on the part of the fair consumer to flirt with various commodities, is responsible for during the month. There was such a lack of confidence as to the ultimate acceptance of the various lines presented by distributors and consumers that buying was somewhat minimized. Prosperity or adversity has nothing to do with the matter.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the love of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman.
