PINE CITY SCHOOL TEACHER WEDS.

The following taken from the Glencoe Enterprise of Thursday Aug. 7 will be of interest to some of our readers.

Last evening at 6 o'clock the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Reiner of this city was the scene of a pretty nuptial ceremony, when their daughter, Miss Gertrude E., one Glencoe's accomplished young lady became the wife of Mr. Leonard L. Greene, of Cut Bank, Mont.

Rev. L. L. Sowles, D. D., pastor of the Congregational church, read the service as the principals stood beneath an arch of asparagus and sweet peas in the living room in the presence of the family, relatives and invited friends.

The bride wore imported voile over white satin and carried bride's roses, while the groom was attired in navy blue. Miss Grace Reiner, a sister, of the bride, acted as maid of honor. She wore blue chamoisee and carried white carnations.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party and invited guests repaired to the dining-room where a buffet luncheon had been prepared. During the course of the evening Miss Victoria Reiners sang "Perfect Day" and "With You." The happy couple left on the night train to spend their honeymoon visiting relatives at different points. They went from here to Dawson, thence will go to points in Iowa and the western states, and will settle in Conrad, Mont., where the groom teaches school. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard L. Greene's permanent home will be at Cut Bank, Mont., where he has land interests. The bride's traveling suit was navy blue with hat to match.

The bride is a graduate of the '01 class of Stevens Seminary and the Winona State Normal school. Since receiving her diploma from the latter institution she has taught school at Park River, N. D., Crookston, and Pine City, Minn., and last year at Skagway, Alaska. She is a young lady who has been appreciated in her home town for her genuine worth and womanly attainments and her splendid personal qualities have made her popular in places where she has taught.

The groom a native of Iowa, and a graduate from the Upper Iowa University. He engaged in teaching school and it was while in the capacity of teacher at Park River, N. D., that he met Miss Reiner, also a member of the teaching corps, finally culminated in the happy event of yesterday.

He has taught at Emmet, Idaho, and is now engaged in that capacity at Conrad, Mont. The groom enjoys the reputation of being a substantial young man of excellent character, worthy of the estimable young lady he has won as his bride. The latter's host of friends here extend heartiest good wishes to them for the future.

The out-of-town guests attending the nuptials were Mr. and Mrs. I. Reiner, Hutchinson; Dr. and Mrs. Bergendale, of Dawson, sister and brother-in-law of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Reiner, of Stewart.

REAL ESTATE CO-PARTNERSHIP FORMED.

H. W. Harte and F. R. Duxbury, of St. Paul, have formed a co-partnership for the buying and selling of lands in Pine County, under the firm name of the Clover Belt Land Co., with H. W. Harte, as President, and F. R. Duxbury, as Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. Duxbury has sold over 300,000 acres of wild land in the northern part of the county. He is a man of wide experience in the real estate business and comes here with the very best of a business reputation. Every one for miles around is acquainted with Mr. Harte, and with his standing in the community, the new firm will no doubt be very successful in getting many new settlers for Pine County.

The new firm will be welcomed in Pine City's business circles. They now have carpenters engaged in fitting up the Glasgow building, formerly occupied by R. G. Gray, as a Pool and Billiard hall, into a first-class modern real estate office. Any business entrusted to the Clover Belt Land Co., will be attended to in the best possible business manner.

The Pioneer joins with others people of Pine City in wishing the new firm success.

FIRE AT SANDSTONE.

Jepson's livery barn was struck by lightning and twelve horses and a cow were burned to death, the barn burning to the grounds. The house next to the barn, occupied by J. A. Slaven, was partly destroyed. The whole block was threatened by fire at one time, but the work of the firemen and a heavy downpour of rain saved all but a few small buildings. Three automobiles left in the barn for the night by tourists were saved from the flames. A. Erickson, a farmer, had his team in the barn, and lost both horses. A subscription was circulated today for his benefit. Jann Sutton, an Indian, had two horses in the building. One broke loose and started for home; the other was burned to death. One horse delonged to Dr. A. P. Dredge was also cremated.

INFLUENCE OF HABIT.

It may be supposed by some that the soul is just as big, and as warm and as sympathetic as the living liver and that nothing the individual man or woman may or can do will expand or enlarge it. That is a mistake. It is just as much a mistake as it would be to say that nothing one may or can do will influence in making the physical body healthy, normal and strong. Every one knows that the habits of a man or a woman have much to do with bodily comfort and strength. Many a man who is endowed with a strong physique, has made of himself a weakling, often a physical and mental wreck, by his habits of intemperance. When the term intemperance is used in this connection, it means intemperance in eating or intemperance in drinking. Intemperance in the gratification of the taste of the flesh, intemperance in anything, one yielding to the slavery of habit may deceive himself and presume that he is having a good time. But he will not have the very same years in find out that his good time is lacking in the quality of longevity. It will be short-lived, says the Knoxville Journal and Tribune. And when his capacity for enjoyment has been plucked, shivered and robbed of the essence of life by the frosts and the storms of time, he is likely to become of all men the most miserable.

Prof. Dallas Lore Sharp of Boston University comes forward to say that twenty-five is the best age for men to marry, says the St. Paul Dispatch. Professors, every now and then, have to say things like this. Similar things have been said before and will be said again. It will be safe to lay small bet that few folks will take the advice, principally because folks seldom do take advice in the matter of marrying, as a result of which we have a large number of fairly successful marriages in the world. Any rule is good which works. Many men marry at twenty-five and are happy. But also men marry at twenty and thirty and forty and fifty and are happy. The proof of marriage, like the proof of everything else, is its working out in practice. There is no best age at which to marry. A man who is a fool at twenty-five will be a fool just the same if he marries at that age. If marriage depended on some one thing it would be possible to make rules. But it so happens that it doesn't depend on any one thing. The one thing that guarantees success in one case would be the very thing that would fail in another case in which the motive was equally or more worthy.

The position of poet laureate is something of a joke, although taken seriously enough by the British people. The idea of an official poet is humorous enough in itself, and as the choice of the poet depends not so much on the character of his poetry as on political influences, the humor becomes intensified. The American mind cannot appreciate the situation, but the poet carries an amount of prestige evidently to the British mind or men of literary reputation would not accept it with the amount of crudity it involves in some one thing of poems of laudation on public and domestic events in the lives of the eminent respectable, says the Baltimore American, but also eminently commonplace persons who comprise the royal family of England.

A member of the English aristocracy who has adopted the stage as a career, says she has done so because she needs the money. This is refreshing. She might have said that she did it in the cause of the uplift of art, or because she wanted of the empty life of the leisure class and wanted a career, or that she desired to blazon the way for her suffering sisters. But to work because she needs the money is an explanation of such genuine heart interest as to be popular at once.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR ARREST OF THAW

NOT AS SLAYER OF WHITE, BUT ON CHARGE OF CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY.

THIS OFFENSE EXTRADITABLE

So Says New York Officials—Thaw Writes Mother That He Will Seen Join Her in Pennsylvania Home.

New York, Aug. 20.—Harry K. Thaw is still free and the police of the United States and Canada have not picked up his trail.

They seek him not as the slayer of Stanford White or as an escaped lunatic, but on a warrant issued at Poughkeepsie charging him with conspiring with the aged keeper, Howard Barnum, and the five men who managed the asylum delivery.

Both Governors Agree. On such a technicality does New York state base its hope of bringing back the fugitive's return. Both factions of the double-barreled government at Albany have promised high investigations and every effort to bring about his capture.

Thaw's seclusion has been absolute. Out of the cloud of dust which swirls in the wake of the black automobile bearing him and his liberators from Matteawan Sunday morning, nothing tangible has come except a laconic letter from the fugitive assuring his mother, in New York, that he desired rest and would, in due time, join her at the Thaw country place, Elmhurst, in Cresson, Pa.

In obedience to this plan, Mrs. Thaw has gone to Cresson. Earlier Story of Escape. As Barnum stepped aside for the milk man to drive inside the grounds, he heard the gravel crunch beneath Thaw's feet and, looking up, saw him flash past him for one of the waiting cars. With a shout, Barnum started in pursuit, but a flying leap landed Thaw safe within the car. The wheels were slowly turning before the keeper had fairly reached the roadway. They were throwing up a cloud of dust before he had gone 25 feet.

The great black car flashed like lightning through Stormville, 10 miles east of Matteawan, along the road to the Connecticut line. Early rises in the little hamlet saw three men and Thaw—crouching low to escape the sweep of their run through the air. They were going 70 miles an hour. They were 10 minutes out of Matteawan. At the speed which the black car traveled through Stormville, Thaw should have reached the state line within half an hour.

Barnum's breathless declaration at the asylum brought Dr. Krieb to his feet like a pistol shot. "Alarm Shout Broadcast." Within a moment he was at the telephone and, as Barnum poured the story into his ear, repeated it over the wire to police headquarters. Matrow became the center of a widening ripple of telephone and telegraph wires as the Krieb alarm passed on.

He might as well have tried to chase a 12-inch shell. The ten-minute start, the high power of the car in which Thaw made his flight, the narrowness of the Connecticut state line toward which Thaw was heading, and the inferior power of the pursuing cars, militated against him and made the chase hopeless. Five minutes ride away he met William Flannigan, a liverrman.

"I saw him," Flannigan shouted. "He was near Flatville village, going 60 miles an hour. I saw him jump and just had time to crowd my horse close over to one side of the road. Just let him keep on; he'll break his neck."

A rigid investigation followed Dr. Krieb to the belief that Thaw planned his flight on a yacht in Long Island sound and that if he reached the yacht it was by relays of automobiles, stationed along the road to throw pursuers off the trail.

Will Arrest Thaw on Sight. New York, Aug. 19.—New York's 10,000 policemen have orders to arrest Harry K. Thaw on sight. A general alert for his apprehension was sent out to every precinct in the city. The police acted on request of the Massachusetts authorities. Here is the description of Thaw sent out in the white. "Height, 5 feet, 11 1/2 inches; weight, 116 pounds; brown hair and eyes; dark complexion. Thin clothing worn by Thaw at the time of his escape was not described.

Guardian Thinks Him Safe. Pittsburgh.—News of Harry K. Thaw's escape excited much interest here. Editorials were sent in touch with the former Governor W. A. Stone, his personal counsel, were full.

Mayor O'Hara, Thaw's guardian, said: "It is a great surprise. I suppose Harry took advantage of an opportunity to get away and grumped it. I hope he is safe by this time. In my opinion, Harry is sound mentally and physically. In fact more so now than ever before. It is time he was out."

HARRY K. THAW

The New York state hospital... housed Thaw not as a murderer, but as an insane person. The jury which sent him there... Stanford White on the same grounds as caused his incarceration in the hospital for the criminally insane... Hence he could not be taken back to New York on the murder charge.

A six-cylinder touring car of 60 horsepower, followed by a limousine, also black, loomed lazily along the road as the milkman drove near the gate.

Thaw, standing a few feet away, apparently unconcerned, watched till Barnum unlocked the gate and swung it wide to let the milkman enter. At the same moment the two cars drove up the further side of the road, opposite the gate, and stood still, their engines throbbing.

As Barnum stepped aside for the milk man to drive inside the grounds, he heard the gravel crunch beneath Thaw's feet and, looking up, saw him flash past him for one of the waiting cars. With a shout, Barnum started in pursuit, but a flying leap landed Thaw safe within the car.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 16.—Leaping from an aeroplane to a balloon in one of the latest thrillers, a London cable to Montreal says: "The latest in moving picture films is a balloon drama taken from the Panama-Pacific exposition in the air. U. S. PROSECUTION ENDS TESTIMONY IN DIGGS' CASE

Lola Norris Again Takes Up Story Before Diplomat's Slur in Mexico Compoure.

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—Lola Norris, who followed Marjorie Warrington to the stand in the trial of Maury I. Diggs, charged with violation of the Mann white slave act, was again called as a witness. She resumed her story that was related with such a mass of detail by her companion in trouble and sorcery slater.

Only in the manner of its delivery did the testimony of Lola Norris differ from that of the other girl. Her answers were sharper and more spirited than those of her companion. She was able to supplement nothing to the narrative of the Warrington girl.

When her cross-examination began she retained her composure, answering the searching questions of the defense evenly and with no show of hesitancy. Throughout she clung to her original story.

Miss Norris said that she was twenty years old August 3 and that she had lived all of her life in Sacramento. When she first met Diggs and Gammett she was employed in the state library. She confirmed the testimony of Miss Warrington and in many places strengthened it by more details.

"If you do not go with us," Diggs said, according to Miss Norris, "you and Marjorie will go to a reformatory." Mr. Diggs and Mr. Gammett both told us she went on, "that their wives had discovered that they were taking us out, that both of the women had decided to file suits against Miss Warrington and myself for alienation of their husbands' affections, that we would be named in divorce suits and correspondents, and that to prove correspondents was a crime punishable by imprisonment."

The prosecution in the government's case against Maury I. Diggs has closed its testimony and opened the way for the defendant to prove his innocence.

SULZER IS REBUKED

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR MAKES FORMAL REQUEST OF CHIEFS' ABDICATION BY LETTER.

SULZER REFUSES TO QUIT

Suggests That Counsel for Both Meet and Agree Upon a Method of Submitting Question to the Courts for Decision—Acting Executive Refuses.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Martin H. Glynn, now in possession of the entire floor, curtly refused William Sulzer's offer to take up the question as to who is governor to the courts. The refusal is final and definite.

Mr. Glynn has declined his ultimatum to Governor William Sulzer, impeached by the state assembly, absolutely refused to give up the reins of government or recognize Governor Martin H. Glynn as acting governor, pending the impeachment trial on September 18, the governor and insisted on Sulzer vacating the office. His letter was as follows:

Text of Glynn's Letter. "State of New York. Lieutenant Governor's Room, Albany, N. Y., Aug. 16, 1913. Hon. Wm. Sulzer, Albany.

"Sir:—In the performance of the duty which has devolved upon me by article 4, section 6, of the constitution, I officially demand that you deliver and surrender to me as acting governor, during the period of your constitutionally disability, to the acting governor, the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices; and that you likewise deliver and surrender to me as acting governor, all documents, papers, records and documents in your charge, possession or custody, relating to it, in any wise connected with or pertaining to the executive department. The bearer hereof is authorized to receive your answer to this communication."

Respectfully, (Signed) "MARTIN H. GLYNN, Lieutenant Governor."

Governor Sulzer's Reply. In his reply the governor said: "Hon. Martin H. Glynn, 'Lieutenant Governor, Albany.' 'Sir:—

"Yours of August 15th demanding that I deliver and surrender to you as acting governor, the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices and that I likewise deliver and surrender to you the executive privilege seal of the state of New York; and also all documents, papers, records and documents in your charge, possession or custody, relating to it, in any wise connected with or pertaining to the executive department, received.

"In response to your letter I decline to recognize you as acting governor of the state, and decline to deliver to you the use, possession and occupancy of the executive chamber and offices, and in any way to comply with the demands and requests in your letter.

"I will continue to exercise and discharge the legal duties of the governor of the state of New York; first, among other reasons, because I have advised that the assembly at its present extraordinary session possess and possess no power or authority to prefer articles of impeachment; and secondly, because the lieutenant governor is not authorized to act as governor in case of the impeachment of the governor unless such impeachment is sustained.

"For the purpose of preventing an unseemly struggle I suggest that counsel for the lieutenant governor and for myself agree upon a method of submitting the question to the courts for decision; and for that purpose, that extraordinary sessions of the courts be forthwith called, in order that an speedy determination may be had.

Respectfully, (Signed) "WILLIAM SULZER, Governor." Mr. Glynn was closeted for half an hour this afternoon with Deputy Attorney General Parsons.

Letter Handed to Governor. The letter was handed to Mr. Sulzer in the capital shortly after noon by Mr. Glynn's private secretary, who had to run the gauntlet of guards before he could get in to see the governor.

This development followed the formal recognition of Mr. Glynn as acting governor by Secretary of State Mitchell.

Deplores Wife's Name in Case. On account of the illness of Mrs. Sulzer, who sustained a nervous collapse over the question of the lieutenant Governor Sulzer did not reach the capital until noon. Accompanied by a number of guards he went straight to his office, not entering the audience chamber. He was pale and his face was lined with worry, and he was white with anger.

"I could fight on unwarmed if those scoundrels had not brought my wife into this case," he said. Gileads Donates 75,000 Bibles. Old Orchard, Me., Aug. 15.—For the purpose of placing 75,000 Bibles in New England homes, 75,000 have been raised by the Gileads in their three days' national convention here.

Twenty Five Years Ago.

The following items are taken from the files of the Pioneer printed 25 years ago.

B. H. Clover returned from a few days visit with relatives in Harris Friday.

Miss "Flo" Hay of this village will teach the fall term of the Mission Creek school this year.

The frame work for the new Methodist church is up and enclosed. The building will be a neat and tasty one.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Dodge started for their eastern trip on Tuesday of this week. They will be gone three or four weeks.

Miss Polly Bregg will wield the rod of correction in the Sandstone schools this year, she having been engaged a number of days ago.

Misses Carrie and Kate Jenkins and Miss Cosette Barlow went over to Grantburg, Thursday, on a visit of a few days with friends and relatives.

Misses Lottie and Hattie, daughters of E. Berry formerly of this place but who now live at Stillwater, was in town this week visiting with friends.

New sidewalks were laid last week in front of the county lots and Thos. Rice's residence, which is a great improvement. Now let others follow this good example.

Quite a number of our citizens went out to Alfred Rice's Friday and assisted in raising a new barn, 50x40 feet. That is the way in which we like to see the country developed.

Street Commissioner P. Madden has had a crew of men at work on the hill near John D. Wilcox's farm cutting down the grade. This road needs considerable improvement, and we are glad to see it receiving attention.

Our village council have kept officers at the dam day and night for the past few days guarding the gates. If Stillwater wants the water, they can get it only by putting a charge of dynamite under the dam and blowing it to smithereens.

Mrs. O. S. Barlow, of La Crosse, Wis., arrived in this village Monday morning, and will remain for a few weeks, a guest at the residence of her uncle Thos. Rice. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Cosette, who spent the greater part of last winter in Pine City, and who will remain here for a few weeks.

The residents of school district No. 7, in the town of Royanton have decided to build a new school house, and plans and specifications have been drawn for a building 18x24, with an entry 6x8. Sealed bids will be received until September 1st, for the work, by John Birtche, clerk of the district. Plans will be on exhibition at the Pioneer office where those who contemplate bidding may examine.

W. X. Folsom, of Taylors Falls, was in town Thursday delivering the book "Fifty Years in the Northwest," written by his father, Hon. W. H. C. Folsom. The book is a valuable acquisition to any library. It is written in Mr. Folsom's clear concise style and is full of interest from the first page to the last. The history of the St. Croix is so accurately given, while the book is embellished with many very interesting stories and sketches.

A decision of more than passing importance to Pine County was rendered by the supreme court of this state last week, in the case of Pine County against the landowner of Doe L. Willard. It will be remembered that Mr. Willard was a defaulting County Treasurer of this county in the sum of $875.15, and that after his last term of office in which the default was made, he left the state, and W. H. Grant, an attorney for the Board of County Commissioners (John D. Wilcox then being Co. Attorney) began an action against David Taylor, Jas. H. Anderson, and Fayette Mack, of Stillwater, county attorneys of St. Paul, A. H. Lamont, of this village, who were Willard's bondsmen for the recovery of his account. The case went to the district court, and upon the election of Mr. McKusick as county attorney, was placed in his hands. After numerous visits, a judgment was rendered in the district court in favor of the plaintiffs, about a year ago. The defendants immediately appealed to the supreme court, where the case was reviewed and the judgment of the trial court was affirmed. The principal interest on the amount now reaches nearly the sum of $1000, which will be recovered by the county. Mr. McKusick is to be congratulated on the outcome of the case, and the citizens of the county naturally feel jubilant, as the matter has hung fire for so many years, that many had almost given up in despair.

HOOVER POTATO DIGGER

Specifications

Main Frame The main frame is made of the best quality gray iron castings with the axle and shovel bolted solid thereto.

Shovel The shovel is made of best quality high carbon crucible steel, formed by us on special dies to just the right shape to scour properly and gather the potatoes with the least possible loss. The corners are turned to permit the shovel to clear without catching or clogging. A special shovel with traps or hinges, for use in stony ground, will be furnished when so ordered.

Beams They unite by a circular tongue and groove inside of the tilting or short beam that connects from the gauging lever to the pole. This makes the main frame very solid and enables the operator to raise and lower the shovel while the machine is in motion.

Truck which protect us fully in its exclusive use on the "Hoover" Potato Diggers. The Double-Action front truck, is our special design, and for which we hold letters patent No. 981,761, which have nearly double the action of the pole and permits machine to be turned around at the end to come back on the next row or shorter if necessary. They also help (by their peculiar action) to follow the row more closely. The wheels are steel with removable hubs and bearings and are protected from dirt by sand bands and have proper means for oiling.

Roller Bearings The bearings for the main elevator shaft are roller bearings, 2 1/2 inches long, absolutely protected from dirt and are oiled by means of six inch oil tubes properly fitted with compression cups.

Drive Wheels The drive wheels are made of steel with staggered or reinforced spokes and are provided with removable hubs. The spurs that bolt on the rim to keep the wheels from slipping are of our own design and are made of specially rolled steel, formed and fitted by us to properly fit the wheels and give the best clearing qualities. They are either made straight for level land or formed with an angle for side hill work.

Dogs are placed in the plate that bolts to the wheels, which engage ratchets in the large sprocket wheels for throwing in and out of gear.

The Draft of our machines depends on the condition of the ground and the depth necessary to go to get the potatoes. In some conditions two horses will handle them easily, and in others it requires four.

All machines are furnished complete with doubletrees, neckyoke and suitable tools.

The "Hoover" adjustable rolling coulters can be attached to any of our machines to cut the vines and weeds at each side of the row. They are adjustable to any width row and to any depth that it is necessary for them to run. When turning around they raise out of the way with the same lever that raises the shovels out of the ground. It is very simple and effective arrangement and should recommend itself to all. They can be attached to any "Hoover" Potato Digger with very little effort.

We give our personal guarantee with every Hoover leaving our store and if they are not all OK in every detail your money will be waiting for you, when you cannot do your work.

J. I. CASE New Foot Lift Sulky and Gang Plows

THE J. I. Case New Foot Lift Sulky and Two and Three-bottom gauges are companion plows, the principle of construction and adjustment of each being identical. The gangs are built heavier in proportion to stand the strain to which they are subjected.

EVEN DEPTH OF FURROW.—One of the plows is to be considered in judging a job of plowing is the evenness of the depth of the furrow. It not only adds to the good appearance of the job, but is important from the crop production standpoint. Shallow plowing in one place and deep in another is not conducive to even crops.

With a plow beam having considerable play, it is obvious that good results could not be secured in this respect. To meet this, on J. I. Case plows the Spring Pressure Lock was devised. As shown by the cut, this spring is strong enough to lock the plow in the ground, to force it into a depression, and to rebound when a raised piece is struck, so that one depth is always maintained. This is an exclusive feature covered by patent.

SHARES SAVED.—In plowing conditions are often met where the best of shares will be broken unless some mechanical contrivance on the type Pressure Lock is the buffer on J. I. Case plows. If a rock or root is struck, the plow jumps enough to go over the obstruction or if breaking, rebounds enough to save the share from the spring force the plow into the ground immediately, without leaving a rough, unplowed spot.

THE TEJON AND THE BLOOD OF THE TEJON

BY HARRY CARR

LD Joaquin Murrieta's buried gold is growing restless in its hiding place. One of the herdsmen and frightened rancho campers, who had seen the light flickering and dancing along the plateau of the Sierritas, is the man who has been seen in front of him for a long time as though to lead him somewhere. Finally, he stopped by the side of a home as fast as he could. Being a Gringo from Cincinnati, he thought it was a ghost.

Any Mexican vaquero would have recognized the sign. Such a light burns over buried treasure—somewhere else.

Had he followed the light, it would probably have led him to the buried loot of old Joaquin Murrieta, Three-Fingered Jack, Tiburcio Vasquez or some other one of the hundred bandits who infested the Tejon Pass and the Valley of the San Joaquin.

And sir, they were bandits. Dick Turpin! Fought! A wretched piker! Dick Turpin and Claude Duval could not get a job cutting hair, because for Joaquin Murrieta, Don Joaquin was, without doubt, the most terrible, bloodthirsty and successful bandit who ever held up a stage.

He was chief of a band that sometimes numbered nearly a hundred desperadoes, and the treasure that he collected must have been enormous.

An examination into the events of his picturesque career would clearly indicate that the stories of his buried gold are not mere vaquero myths. He must have left treasure in considerable quantities cached somewhere in the vicinity of the Tejon ranch—very likely in the Tejon Pass.

Murrieta is described as a very ordinary-looking young Mexican at the time he began his depredations. He sometimes went by the name of Carrillo and many suppose that to have been his real name.

He came up from Mexico, where he was born, at the time of the California gold excitement in 1849. With him came a beautiful young Spanish girl of a high-born family. Her name was Roseta Felix.

She and Joaquin settled in Stanislaus county and had begun washing the gravel for gold when he was tragically captured. Tiburcio Vasquez, the cruellest outlaw the world has known.

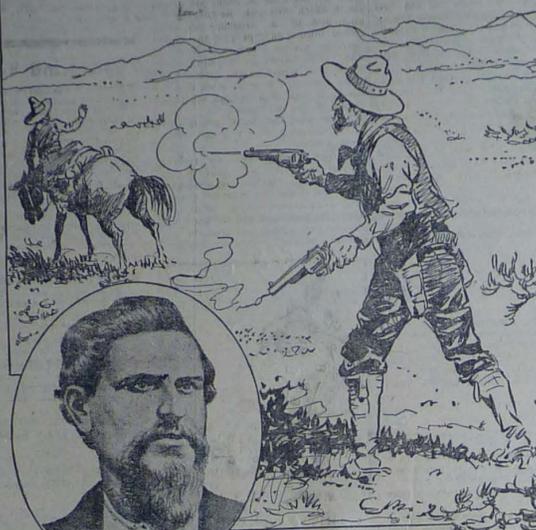

At that time there were all manner of "race riots" going on in California as a result of the "foreign" mining men who had been passing. During one of these riots, Murrieta and his bride were driven out of the gold diggings with insult and indignity. Shortly thereafter, Joaquin, while riding a horse borrowed from his half brother, was arrested and whipped as a horse thief.

With black murder in his heart he "took the road," and no one knows how many innocent lives were sacrificed to wipe out the wrong done this Mexican poon when he led to a tree at Murphy's Diggins in Calaveras county the day when they took him from the "borrowed horse."

On account of the injustice of the anti-foreign legislation, there were hundreds of young Mexicans ripe for Joaquin's pickings and the soon followed a desperate band of cut-throats. Chief among them were Manuel Garcia, known as Three-Fingered Jack on account of a mutilated hand which had been wounded in the Mexican war; Reyes Felix, a brother of his bride; Claudio, Joaquin Valenzuela and Pedro Gonzalez.

Three-Fingered Jack was a monster of vice and maniacal cruelty. He seemed to take a special delight in murdering Chinese. On one occasion he rounded up six Chinamen on the road, tied their hands together and cut their throats one at a time—laughing at the terrified yells of the living as the dying men struggled in their blood.

For about four years Murrieta had ravaged central California. Their main field of operations was through the San Joaquin valley. The old-timers say that the stage that ran from Los Angeles to Stockton was held up so many times in the vicinity of Bakerville that it became an ordinary and commonplace event. No road was safe and every traveler lived at the peril of his life. The solitary horseman, riding the clump of chapparal, was quite likely to hear the ring of a riat through the air and feel the rope settling round his shoulders with a jerk that dragged him from the saddle. The band of robbers that worked for Murrieta were unlike in that the riat was their chief weapon—the riat and the bowie knife. Many of Murrieta's victims were dragged from the saddle and had their throats cut.

There was seldom any parley with the victims nor any mercy shown. With Murrieta it was not only a quest of treasure but a merciless war of revenge against the Gringo.

On one occasion Murrieta and his men held up a schooner on the river near Stockton and, murdering the crew, got away with $50,000. In the firm discipline that he maintained over his gang of cut-throats, Joaquin was comparable to Robin Hood. Also like Robin Hood, all sorts of stories of his impudent daring and his whimsical kindnesses are told. Some of the stories, in fact, are very like the legends of Sherwood forest and the men in the Lincoln green.

Murrieta took all sorts of reckless chances. On one occasion one of his bandits was on trial in a San Jose court. Murrieta had, shortly before, waylaid and murdered a gentleman named Samuel Harrington. Talking Harrington's papers, Joaquin went into court, pretended to be Harrington, gave false testimony and secured the acquittal of his pal.

Another time, in Sacramento, a crowd stood looking at a poster which offered $5,000 for the capture of Murrieta. A Mexican pushed his way through the crowd and wrote on the bottom of the placard: "I will give $10,000 myself—Joaquin Murrieta." Jumped on a horse and escaped.

The night he imagined the horrors of Murrieta's crimes roused a great hue and cry throughout California. Hunted like wild animals, Murrieta and his followers selected a dark canyon near the mouth of Tejon Pass for their headquarters and divided into three bands.

The country was becoming too dangerous for him to continue his work in. Claudio had been killed in a desperate battle at San Luis Obispo. Felix, Joaquin's brother-in-law, had been hanged in Los Angeles. Pedro Gonzalez had been shot by another near Canaan to prevent his rescue from arrest by the bandits. The Tejon Indians, becoming enraged at some depredation that concerned them, had swooped down upon the bandits, stole their horses and whipped some of the gang with lashes.

Although he wreaked a horrible revenge against those who tried to capture or hinder him, Murrieta never made any attempt to punish these Indians never made any attempt to punish these Indians who took even the clothes from the gang.

General Ben in San Gabriel, who tried to organize a movement against Murrieta, was waylaid on the road and murdered. A campaign was started against the bandits in the town of Saw Mill Flat and Murrieta had the water poisoned.

But finally, Murrieta's Nemesis appeared. He was a Texas frontiersman named Harry Love, who had come to Los Angeles to live. He organized a company of rangers from among the daring horsemen of Los Angeles and went on a systematic hunt for outlaws.

On both sides, the end came early one Sunday morning, July 25, 1853. Love and two or three companions were riding ahead of the mounted rangers on the flats just west of Tulare lake in the San Joaquin valley. They came upon a small company of Mexicans eating breakfast around a camp fire.

Love asked them what they were doing and one of them replied that they were on their way to Los Angeles. He asked a further question of the man, whereupon a Mexican on the other side of the fire spoke up haughtily, saying: "I am the leader of this band; say what you have to say to me."

"I will speak to whomever I please," retorted Love. Noticing that the Mexican had risen and was sliding over toward a saddle that lay on the ground, Captain Love covered him with a revolver and told him to stand still, for there were revolvers on the saddle.

While they were standing there, a ranger who knew Murrieta by sight came up. The recognition was mutual. Joaquin suddenly yelled for his men to escape as best they could. Leaping on a horse without saddle or bridle, Murrieta went headlong over a bank and down into a ravine, landing in a tangled heap at the bottom. Neither his horse nor himself was hurt, however.

Scrambling to their feet, they started off at a dead run down the canyon. One of the rangers had followed them. Murrieta and his men also went without attempting to remount, he took careful aim and shot Murrieta's horse as it ran.

The outlaw leaped from the falling horse and continued his retreat on foot. By this time half a dozen rangers were following him. Three times, as they fired, he was seen to hesitate and rest; then run on again. One last shot and he stopped.

Turning, he raised his hand and said: "Don't shoot any more, the work is done." He stood for a minute with his hands behind his back, then sank slowly to his right side, his head upon his arm. Wicked old Joaquin Murrieta was no more. Another pursuing party overtook and killed Three-Fingered Jack. One of the bandits escaped and drowned himself in the San Joaquin river. Another was murdered by Mexicans who were afraid he might reveal to the authorities their connection with the band.

Murrieta's head was cut off and, until the San Francisco earthquake, was on exhibition in a museum in San Francisco. At the time of his death Don Joaquin was preparing his grandest coup. He intended to collect all his booty and march, his men openly, to the city of Mexico. The old-timers assert that he had his foot caught in the Tejon for this "getaway" and that it is still there.

CHEAP HELP ON MANY FARMS

Besides Adding to Revenue of Farmer by Wool and Mutton, Sheep Devour Many Noxious Plants.

By W. A. LINKLATER, Oklahoma Experiment Station.

It would be a pity if the revenue of many farms if a flock of sheep were kept. Besides being profitable they are great weed eaters. They will eat five out of six of our noxious weeds, where a cow or horse will eat only one out of every six.

Range-bred sheep are the right kind for the average farmer to buy. Such for the graded Merinos and if they carry a cross of Shropshire, Lincoln and other mutton blood, so much the better. It would not be advisable to buy Mexican sheep or low grade sheep of any other kind.

The ewes purchased for the foundation flock should be good, large and mals from one to 100 pounds by May 1, weighing more than 100 pounds. Where possible it would seldom be practical to start with less than 50 ewes, and a larger number would be better still. A flock of a dozen would require almost as much care as 50 or 100. These range-bred grade Merinos should be bred to a Dorset ram if possible.

The reason we recommend buying range-bred grade Merino ewes is that thousands of these are available, while Dorsets are not to be had in large numbers.

These fall or early winter lambs, by good feeding and care can be made to weigh 90 to 100 pounds by May 1, when they will find a ready market and will always be in demand. Such lambs should bring from $5 upward.

SELECTING CORN FOR SEED

Technical Knowledge on Part of Farmer Not Necessary for Improvement of His Crop.

(By J. M. GRAY.)

The possibilities of improvement of corn by judicious selection, are very great. Ever since man has been tilling the soil, he has changed the character of plants by consciously or unconsciously making selections. This has been done by the farmer who has selected the best ears of his crop for sowing.

Every farmer who is growing corn should plant some standard variety which has been tested and gives the most profitable yields in his locality, and from this he should select, each year, seed that comes nearest to his ideal. It is necessary to make this selection each year because if it is not done the corn will soon revert to the original type and lose those qualities which the farmer has been striving to get.

In your selections, instead of looking for an ideal ear only, look for an ideal stalk made up of an ideal stem, of ideal foliage and of an ideal root system bearing an ideal ear or ears covered with ideal husks, and supported by ideal roots. Possibly this will be hard to find, but you can find something which approaches it and from this, with your ideal in view, you can select continually until you have a plant very nearly approaching that ideal.

Interior Lambs.

Lambs of low vitality and ewes deficient in milk flow at lambing time are usually the result of improper management during the pregnant period.

DAIRY NOTES

Not all cow keepers are dairy farmers.

Warm and cold cream ought not to be mixed.

Good dairy stock show their possibilities early.

Many eastern farmers feed grain to milk cows on pasture.

Quiet and comfort are what count in dairying and more especially in hot-weather dairying.

Successful dairying depends entirely on right methods in breeding, feeding and management.

If there is no silo on your farm, do not let another winter catch you unprepared. Make your plans right now for one.

Often times the one who has dairy cows will not take his own fat or tallow, while those who sell cream get nothing but cash.

In selecting cows, all signs may fall, but the Duroc test is absolutely reliable. It will tell you whether the cows are good or not.

Want Changeable Dress? At the recent International Congress of Applied Chemistry in London one of the most celebrated lecturers, Giacomo Ciamician, predicted that women of the future will not be contented with a dress which remains constantly of one color, but will demand colors that change in harmony with their surroundings.

Thus the color of the apparel may be changed without changing the dress. Passing from darkness to light the color would brighten, thus conforming automatically to the environment—the last word in fashion for the future.

This prediction will come true as soon as chemists learn to understand better what are called "photocolor" or "color" that change with the intensity of the light upon them. In men's wear this might mean that the light-colored suit of the bright summer day would be transformed into dark suit at night.

POTENTIATES AMUSE LONDON

When a foreign potentate or royalty of minor rank visits London for the first time, a clerk from the foreign office is usually detailed by the government to "show him round," or, in official language, to get in the "potentate's" "familiar" acquaintance.

Some years ago a prince of the reigning family of a minor European state arrived in London for a short visit without a penny.

The attaché, however, who was commissioned to look after him, brought a pawnbroker to the hotel where the prince was staying, who advanced £1,000 on the prince's jewels, which lasted the prince until he obtained money from his own country, fortunately only a few days later.

One of the most amusing incidents I remember in connection with my experiences as a visiting attaché was when I took the then crown prince of Blam to a great society bazaar. The prince evidently did not understand, though I tried to explain to him, that the ladies selling at the bazaar were persons of high rank.

A few minutes after he entered the bazaar several great ladies approached him, asking him to buy some of their wares. One of these was a Duchess. "Tell these women to kneel when they address me," he said to me in broken French. The ladies, who understood him, promptly did so, and succeeded in taking about £50 off the prince, before they took. Nothing on earth could, however, convince the crown prince of the high rank of the saleswomen.

Worms in Horses.
Horses have different kinds of worms inhabiting different parts of the intestines and requiring somewhat different treatments. If those who call on the Experiment Station for information on the subject could give more specific information, describing the worms, or would send us a sample, we could give more definite advice concerning treatment. There is no one specific or best treatment for worms. It is a good plan to keep a mixture of equal parts of salt and sifted hardwood ashes constantly before horses.
For the white worms, six to twelve inches long, and other common worms living free in the intestines, try the following treatment: First give a mild physic, such as a pint to a quart of raw linseed oil. Feed litter or no hay for three days. On the fourth day give two or three ounces, that is, from five to seven tablespoons, of turpentine in a pint of raw linseed oil. Repeat the same dose of turpentine and linseed oil on the fifth day, and repeat the whole process beginning on the fifteenth day from the start.
This dose is for a thousand-pound horse and should be given in portion to weight. Judgement should be used concerning the condition and strength of the horse and how easily any particular horse is affected by cathartic medicines. Never give a severe physic to any horse that is thin and weak. M. H. Reynolds, Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul.
